BURGLARS SMASH SAFE

Burglars secured more than $3,000 in cash, diamonds and other jewelry and negotiable papers from an office at No. 255 Broadway, South Boston, today and escaped.

The office is occupied jointly by Peter Viluknas, jeweler, and G. J. Gegusis, published of the Lithuanian newspaper, Keleivis.

The first one of the occupants to arrive at the office discovered the burglary.

Entrance had been gained through a rear window. They smashed Viluknas' safe, in which money and stock had been deposited the night before.

About $1,000 in cash and some valuable papers were taken from the safe. Then the burglars rifled a jewelry showcase, taking gold watches, rings and diamonds to the value of another $1,000.

The jeweler's office desk was smashed. Then the burglars broke into the publisher's desk, securing $500 in cash and papers, according to the report made to the police. The total loss to the two men was given at $3,000 or more.

The burglary was reported to the police, but there was little to furnish a clew. The police said that the burglary was probably committed after 4 a. m., which would place it between 4 and 6.

PORTSMOUTH SHELLED IN RAID

By International News Service.

Berlin, via Sayville, Sept. 27.—The British naval port of Portsmouth and other points near the mouth of the Thames were bombarded by the Zeppelins which raided England Monday night, according to the German Admiralty's announcement issued today. Following is the text of the statement:

"On the night of September 25-26 German naval airships extensively dropped explosives and incendiary bombs with visible success on the naval port of Portsmouth and fortified places near the mouth of the Thames, as well as on industrial and railroad establishments of military importance in central England, including North Shields, Lincoln and Derby. The airships returned unharmed, in spite of strong anti-air craft action."

The British official press bureau, in reporting Monday night's Zeppelin raid, said that "very slight" military damage was done.

GREEK DESTROYER PLEES FROM PORT

London, Sept. 27.—The incident of the Italian submarine which in the early days of King Victor's neutrality slipped out to sea, ostensibly to join the allies, has been duplicated. The destroyer Lonchi of the Greek navy, which King Constantine ordered kept in port when rumors came that officers and crew were pro-ally, has slipped past the cordon of Greek destroyers. She is believed to be bound for Canea or Salonica to participate in the "national defence" movement, by bombing parties.

Blackmail Dupes to Reveal Plots

By International News Service.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Encouraged by the example of A. R. West, wealthy tea and coffee merchant, who has told the authorities all the details of the plot by which he was blackmailed out of $15,000, federal authorities said today other victims were about to come forward with evidence against the so-called "million dollar blackmail syndicate."

Another wealthy Chicagoan is said to be among those who have consented to testify. An Iowa business man, who paid the blackmailers $10,000 as a result of his having passed some of his time in Chicago in the company of two young women, is said to be another.

State warrants have been issued for the four men and one woman who are accused of swindling West.

OVER 3,000 GERMANS TAKEN IN FRANCE

London, Sept. 27.—Between 2,000 and 4,000 German prisoners have reached the British army's collecting stations on the Somme front within the past forty-eight hours, says a supplemental War Office report issued early today. These prisoners were taken in the fighting around Thiepval, Gueudecourt and Combles. Savage fighting has continued in the darkness of German dugouts, and underground labyrinths, which are being cleared

ALLIES WIN DOBRUDJA VICTORY

London, Sept. 27.—Outstanding in today's war news is a crushing defeat administered to Field Marshal von Mackensen's German-Bulgar army in the Dobrudja, Rumania, after a two-day battle.

Von Mackensen's forces were decisively defeated and compelled to retire in disorder.

The battle was in some respects like the early fighting in Belgium, when British vessels of low draft used to ascend the canls to shell the German invaders, for Rumanian gunboats plying on the Danube played an important part in von Mackensen's defeat.

It was also comparable to the engagement before Richmond, Va., in the American Civil War, when federal gunboats drove back General Joseph Johnston on the Confederate capital.

THROWN BACK.

An Amsterdam dispatch today says: "Not only has the German-Bulgar offensive in Dobrudja, Rumania, been checked, but Field Marshal von Mackensen's forces have been thrown back within twelve miles of the Rustchuk-Varna railway. The dispatch reaching here today conveying this information added that the Rumanians and Russians are still pursuing the German allies."

If the foregoing information is true it means that the Teutonic forces in Dobrudja have retreated from fifteen to twenty miles since their offensive was halted.

Anglo-French armies on the Somme front have followed up their great victory with smashing assaults upon German positions at the northern and southern ends of the line, where fresh progress has been made. Working under German gunfire, the allies consolidated the new positions at Combles and Thiepval, while attacks were pressed home near Faucourt l'Abbaye and Vermandovillers. The

Professor Found Not Guilty After Assault Charge

Professor Dethert M. Staley, teacher at the College of the Spoken Word, at No. 146 Stewart street, Back Bay, accused of assault and battery on Julius Quint, a collector for a florist, was found not guilty when arraigned before Judge Parmenter in the Municipal Court today.

According to the testimony of Quint, he went to the college to collect a bill of $25 which he alleged the professor had contracted for flowers from a Boylston street florist. After requesting the professor for payment of the bill, Quint claimed he was struck on the shoulder with a cane and thrown out into the street by Staley.

Professor Staley denied any assault on the collector.

BRITISH ANNOUNCE GAIN NEAR COMBLES

By International News Service.

London, Sept. 27.—The War Office in its regular day report stated that further progress has been made in the direction of Faucourt-L'Abbaye, five miles northwest of Combles, and that nine German aeroplanes have been shot down or damaged in air fighting on the British front. The text follows:

"The new positions gained by us during the past two days were consolidated during the night. Patrol detachments pushed forward at many places and are in close touch with the enemy. We made further progress during the night, particularly in the direction of Faucourt-L'Abbaye. We carried out a successful trench raid opposite Beaumont-Hamel.

"In the neighborhood of Loos three hostile aeroplanes were destroyed. In air fighting on Monday six enemy machines were downed or damaged."

MYSTERY IN TRIPLE SHOOTING

By International News Service.

Philadelphia, Sept. 27.—Though facing death from bullet wounds and stanchly withstanding all "third degree" attempts by detectives, the "woman of mystery" in the Graveur murder case refuses today to disclose her identity, determined, the police believe, to shield her family and save her name.

It is she who holds the key to the solution of the killing at the Hotel Walton early this morning of Joseph C. Graveur, New York garage owner, by Mrs. Harry Belzer of New York and the latter's suicide.

The "woman of mystery" who was in the room with Graveur on the ninth floor a few feet below the roof garden where a concert and dance was taking place, was herself shot by Mrs. Belzer.

IDENTIFIED BY SISTER.

Mrs. Bizer's body was identified today at a morgue by Mrs. Francis Apman of New York, Graveur's sister. The woman now at the point of death in the Jefferson Hospital is said to be married and to be prominent in New York society. Mrs. Belzer was separated from her husband.

"I have nothing to say," the woman told Magistrate Rooney at the hospital. "You know you are going to die, don't you?" a detective asked. The woman, a beautiful blonde, not more than thirty, regarded the questioner with the flicker of a weary

MAN SLAIN IN ASYLUM IS CHARGE

The alleged slaying of a patient at the Medfield State Hospital for the Insane became known today, when warrants charging manslaughter were issued for three of the attendants at the institution. The warrants were issued by Judge Grover in the Dedham District Court.

The attendants arrested are Wesley H. Linton, Thomas McGrath and Frank Hale. The man was found dead this morning, and after a preliminary investigation the warrants were applied for. The dead man was Cornelio Strazzulla.

Whether Strazzulla was smothered to death or whether he died from the the effects of a beating is not announced. His body was found under circumstances which warranted calling in the police and notifying the State Board of Insanity.

According to the story which the three men told to Dr. Edward French, head of the hospital, Strazzilla, who was seated on a settee with a number of other patients last night, grabbed Hale, the attendant, as he was passing.

Hale struggled with Strazzilla, who had the reputation of being a dangerous and violent patient.

Hale shouted for help and Linton and McGrath came to his assistance.

There followed a struggle during which the four men fought back and forth up and down the corridors and which ended only when the patient was exhausted and overpowered.

Strazzilla, in a weak condition from his struggles and with a bad cut on his nose, which Dr. French says he sustained by striking against the settee, was placed in a private room, and the head attendant, Joseph Smith, was notified.

On seeing the condition of the patient, Smith telephoned for Dr. Allan Troxell, one of the staff of the institution, who, upon his arrival, found the man dead. Another version of the story was that the man was found dead in bed today.

DRASTIC MOVE BY MAYOR

The most drastic measures yet taken to fight infantile paralysis were taken today, when Mayor Curley issued an order prohibiting any child under sixteen years of age from entering any place of amusement.

The order followed a conference between the Mayor and the health commissioner, Dr. Francis X. Mahoney.

John F. Cases, the Mayor's censor, began at once to notify the amusement places of the ruling.

There have been 146 cases of infantile paralysis in Boston since the disease first gained a foothold in the early Summer, with fifty-one deaths.

A similar order applying only to Hyde Park and East Boston, prohibiting children from entering amusement places in those sections, was issued several weeks ago.

"The order was issued," Mayor Curley said, "on account of the outbreak of infantile paralysis in the West End, North End and in East Boston.

"Children from East Boston have been coming across on the ferry, attending the places of public amusement in town and exposing children and adults to infection from the disease.

It was found that the original order, which was confined to the East Boston and Hyde Park districts, did not provide adequate protection for the city as a whole.

When denied the opportunity of attending public amusements in East Boston, the children came to Boston.

Mayor Curley announced that a meeting of public-spirited citizens has been called for tomorrow forenoon at 11 o'clock, in the old Municipal chamber, to stimulate interest in the campaign to clean up the alleys, streets and private ways of the city.

Invitations have been sent to the Chamber of Commerce, the Boston City Club and the various improve-

PALMER REVIEWS 'BIG PUSH' AS EYEWITNESS

By FREDERICK PALMER, Accredited Correspondent with the British Army of the Press of the United States.

At the British Front, Sept. 27.—The allied commanders made the most of Tuesday's summery weather by following up Monday's successful attacks with more attacks, and after Monday night's incessant fighting the front of the battle broadened to include the whole of the British left wing. At this writing the air is full of rumors and reports of success are coming in from all directions. The fierce day's program began with the taking of Combles and it closed with the taking of Gueudecourt and Thiepval.

Combles was surrounded Monday. Sitting in a heap of hills it was isolated by possession of the high ground on either side by the French and English. Its actual fall was one of the most picturesque incidents in the relations of the British and the French armies.

HOW COMBLES FELL.

In the early hours of the morning the British took an orchard on the northern outskirts and, after shelling heavily charged the trenches on the edge of the village, but found no Germans.

At the same time the French were coming in from the other side of the village. The two forces met in the gray dawn and shook hands in the main street calling out "Paris vous" and "How d'ye do."

Combles had a labyrinth of dugouts and cellars well fortified, but which made practically no defense. Those of the Germans who had not succeeded in escaping when Combles was hopelessly surrounded were taken prisoners. One lot of Germans who were endeavoring to find their way out through the encircling ranks of the allied infantry, walked right into the British skirmish line.

The cellars and dugouts of the village were full of wounded, who had found security there from the furious fighting on the slopes and ridges.

Having cleared the town, hill and stray Germans, the British and French moved on to further attacks side by side. Both Combles and Morval, the village which the British took Monday, were well fortified. While Combles was indefensible, once the ridges around it were taken, Morval was naturally a strong position and the Germans yielded it after a surprisingly slight resistance.

Prisoners in battles have been coming in from all parts of the front. In their attacks Monday the British found the strongest German defense in front of Gueudecourt. There the Germans used their machine guns with the tenacity and a courage which hitherto characterized them.

The British renewed their attack yesterday and last night all the villages were in their possession. Both yesterday and Monday the Germans have shown no inclination to withdraw their guns unnecessarily; they were in danger evidently desiring to take no risks of losing any of their artillery. This accounts for their withdrawal in the front line unprotected by gunfire and may account for their ready surrender.

WAR SUMMARY

Operations on the west front continue today to hold the centre of the war stage. What is to follow the capture of Combles and Thiepval, now achieved by the allies, is the natural question. The latest information from Paris indicates that the allies are not merely to await the inevitable German counter attacks, against which they have been consolidating themselves in their new positions. Instead they have begun a new drive on Peronne, the French doing the fighting. A wood east of Vermandovillers has been taken by Joffre's men in this new fighting and an artillery duel has opened in the Barleux sector, probably prefatory to infantry attacks.

Barleux is northeast of Vermandovillers and six miles from Peronne. Vermandovillers is about a dozen miles southwest of Combles and eight miles from Peronne. The new operations of the allies doubtless have for their objective the outflanking of Bapaume and the capture of Peronne, the key work of the German defence on the 100-mile Noyon salient. This gigantic labor, although Peronne is already reported seriously menaced, seems likely to occupy the allies in the west for days to come.

Paris announces renewed activity by the Bulgars in Greek Macedonia, but states that all attacks against the Serbian positions were repulsed. Once again Athens news advices declare Greece is on the verge of entering the war, and this time the Rubicon is expected to be crossed today. Venizelos has arrived in Crete and his adherents are leaving Athens, which would not indicate that they expect immediate pro-ally action by the government.

On the Rumanian-Teuton front, a great battle is reported in progress. Vienna admits the Rumanians have ousted the Teutons, as reported yesterday, from the Vulcan and Szurduk passes, the so-called gateways to Transylvania. The Teutons have launched a heavy attack ner Hermanstadt, and it is evident they are not intending to yield the rich Transylvanian acres without a vigorous defence. Some military experts read between the lines of the war reports concerning this front the story of a disastrous Teuton defeat.

FRENCH IN NEW DRIVE ON SOMME

Teutons were hurled back with heavy losses.

BRITISH CAPTURE 3,000.

Infantry fighting and violent artillery duelling continues at many points. The British alone have taken between 2,000 and 4,000 prisoners in the past forty-eight hours.

Desperate fighting continues in Greek Macedonia. The Bulgarian claim to have defeated the Serbians near Kaymakcalan, but this is denied in official dispatches to the French War Office, which stated that the Bulgarian attacks were repulsed. Allied headquarters in Saloniea report that the engagement is still in progress. Fourteen more German aeroplanes and one captive balloon have been shot down or damaged by allied airmen. British aviators accounted for nine German machines, while French fliers put five more planes and one balloon out of commission. In addition to the aerial actions many towns behind the German lines have been bombed by the allied flyers.

New Drive Opened by Joffre's Army.

By CHARLES P. BERTELLI, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, Sept. 27.—Following the terrific threat of the Anglo-French armies on the Thiepval-Combles line, the French have launched a separate drive on the southern end of the Somme front, capturing a wood east of Vermandovillers.

The French War Office, in announcing this success today stated that the achievement was the result of a brilliant attack. An artillery duel of the utmost violence develops in the Barleux sector, the communique says.

"Vermandovillers is on the section of the front held exclusively by the French. It is between eleven and twelve miles southwest of Combles and eight miles from Peronne. Barleux is northeast of Vermandovillers and six miles from Peronne.

Reports received early today emphasized the magnitude of the spectacular victory won by the allies on the Somme front on Tuesday. The capture of Combles and Thiepval by Anglo-French armies, announced last night by the British office, has compelled the Germans to retire from two to four miles between the Ancre and Somme rivers, while the capture of men and booty are growing hourly.

Using batteries of their guns, the Germans began a powerful bombardment of the new positions of the allies on the Thiepval-Guedecourt-Fregicourt-Hancourt line, but, despite this fire, British and French troops were kept at the task all night of consolidating their new line against the counter attacks the Germans are expected to launch.

Today's official statement follows:

"North of the Somme our troops are organizing the positions conquered by them. The enemy did not attempt any counter attack during the night.

"South of the Somme a lively artillery battle raged in the region of Barleux.

"Yesterday evening a brilliantly executed attack east of Vermandovillers enabled us to capture a wood, which formed a small salient in our line and which had been strongly held by the enemy.

"Everywhere else in front the night was calm."

NORMAN PRINCE WINS AIR BATTLE

Norman Prince, son of Frederick H. Prince, the Boston banker, has set a new record for the French flying corps, according to dispatches today from Paris, by bringing down two German fokkers and a German observation balloon in the same day.

Recently Prince, the most active of the Americans in the French aviation corps, was said to have been "missing" after a scouting trip. Cables a few days later announced that the daring Bostonian had returned safely to his squadron headquarters.

The news today of his exploit in bagging three German aerial craft in one day is the first report from Prince since his return from that previous scouting trip was made known.

Prince's latest feat, today's cables said, took place on Monday somewhere on the Alsace stretch of the French front. He engaged in spectacular air duels with two fokkers, shooting down both machines. Soon after that he brought down a German observation balloon.

Prince has a dazzling record for aerial fighting. Early in August he brought down a Zeppelin single handed. He was scouting near the German lines and spied a Zeppelin approaching. Without waiting for reinforcements Prince shot his machine up over the Zeppelin and as he passed over, fired bomb after bomb. Many of the bombs struck. The Zeppelin began to settle. Prince dropped nearer for a final shot, a "coup de grace." This last bomb sent the Zeppelin to the ground, a wreck.

Prince has worn out a dozen aeroplane engines, in long and frequent flights. He has lost eight machines since the war started, but has succeeded every time in getting back within his own lines.

One of his greatest endurance feats was piloting a bombarding squadron 10 nine days he made ten long flight attacks. This feat was the talk of army aviators on both sides.

Bulgars in Greece Push Big Battle.

By International News Service.

CABINET CONFERS ON GREEK ACTION

By International News Service.

London, Sept. 27.—A fateful Cabinet conference is in session in Athens. Upon it hangs Greece's decision in the war.

The result of the deliberations probably will not be known for some hours, but already rumors are in circulation in Athens that the ministers are about to join the fortunes of Greece with those of the Entente. At least the result will be a complete surrender to the demands of the Franco-British representatives at the Greek capital. The Greek Government will clean house of all pro-German sympathizers or pro-neutralists and a Cabinet completely in sympathy with the Allies will be formed. This decision is expected to lead to the removal of Minister of Interior Roufas and Minister of Justice Cokotopoulos from their portfolios.

At the time the Ministers assembled it became known here in a delayed dispatch that Greece has already offered to take up arms for the Entente provided a sufficient force to equip and mobilize her army is extended. There were even reports in circulation here that Greece may declare war on the central Empires and their allies before the passing of another day.

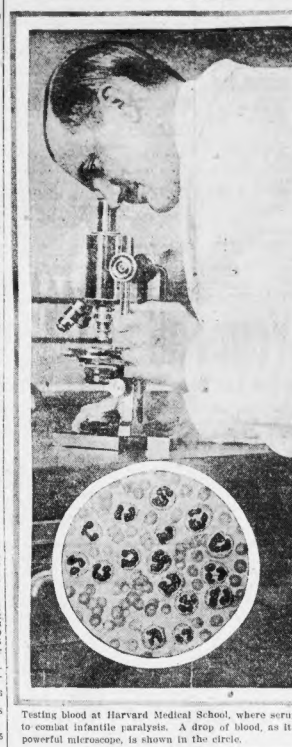
TEN OFFER BLOOD TO SAVE PLAGUE VICTIMS



Testing blood at Harvard Medical School, where serum is being made to combat infantile paralysis. A drop of blood, as it is seen under a powerful microscope, is shown in the circle.

The Harvard Medical School is out with a plan to alleviate infantile paralysis in the early stages of the disease, and it is calling upon the public to co-operate.

This can be done by every one who has recovered from the disease. Blood will be taken from such persons and made into a serum for use in the treatment of the disease.

About ten persons have responded to this request, but more are needed. Applicants are receive by the Infantile Paralysis Commission at the Harvard Medical School.

"There is no danger in this offering of blood for serum," says a doctor. "If you are not willing to go to the school and have someone in your house, who has recovered from the disease, would you be willing to allow an expert of the Harvard Medical School to visit your home and take the blood for this serum?

"By doing this you may save the life of some other person who is afflicted."

While physicians want it to be known that it is not definitely established that the use of the serum is of benefit, yet it is considered a move in the right direction.

The serum will be furnished free of charge and will be administered in co-operation with State Department of Health and local health authorities.

Experts are studying the blood obtained through the microscopes and other means are being taken to make a serum which may check the spread of this plague.

The commission consists of Dr. Robert W. Lovett (chairman), professor of orthopedic surgery; Dr. Milton J. Rosenau, professor of preventive medicine and hygiene, Dr. Francis E. Peabody, assistant professor of medicine, and Roger Pierce, secretary.

WOMAN KILLS MAN AND ENDS OWN LIFE

Two policemen were left stationed at her bedside.

Mrs. Apsman insisted to the police that she did not know the name of the woman at the hospital.

"She is prominent in society—that's all I can say," she told detectives.

Graveur was shot through the heart and died instantly.

Mrs. Luther shot herself through the temple and fell dead by the side of Graveur.

JEALOUSY THE CAUSE.

The police say jealousy was the cause of the woman's act. She is said to have trailed Graveur and his companion in Atlantic City where they had spent several days before coming to this city.

The woman who did the shooting was young, beautiful and modestly dressed. She was between twenty-seven and thirty.

Graveur, whose home address is given in the New York directory as the Hotel Cecil, appeared at the Walton at about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He drove up in a gray runabout. With him was the woman who passed as his wife.

ATTENDED THEATRE.

Graveur signed the register "J. C. Graveur and wife, New York," and they were given a room on the ninth floor, just below the hall room. They didn't dine at the hotel. After taking dinner in some cafe, they went to the theatre, as two ticket stubs were found in the man's pockets.

A taxicab driver told Captain of Detectives Callahan today that the woman who killed Graveur had gone last night to four hotels before she succeeded in locating where the couple were staying.

WOMAN IN ROPER DEATH TRIAL COLLAPSES

Mrs. Jessie Fox of No. 16 Walt street, Roxbury, was so agitated by the examination on the witness stand at the Roper murder trial at East Cambridge today that, when recess was ordered at 11 o'clock, she tottered into a hallway, collapsed on a settee and sobbed deeply.

Mrs. Fox is the waitress at whose Roxbury flat Albert J. Roper, the defendant at the trial, was living at the time of the murder of his father, Albert Roper, the Taunton florist.

DAUGHTER PRESENT.

When she collapsed in the hallway her twelve-year-old daughter, Dorothy, and her friend, Mrs. Florence Elliott Canute, who lived in the flat overhead when young Roper was lodging with Mrs. Fox, strove to comfort and quiet the distressed witness.

Mrs. Fox, who was put on as a State witness, has been questioned in direct examination by District Attorney Robert J. Crowley.

He read extracts of testimony she gave before the Grand Jury.

Q.—You were told by Roper that his father's estate would be about $100,000, weren't you? A.—He said something like that.

Q.—Then you testified that you read in the papers that he would probably be worth $100,000, didn't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Roper told you the greenhouses alone were worth $40,000? A.—Yes.

"WOULDN'T HAVE TO WORK."

Crowley read her Grand Jury testimony in which she had said that after she and young Roper were married things would be different and she would not have to work.

In her early testimony today Mrs. Fox testified to events at her flat the morning after the Tewksbury murder. Her last testimony Monday—there was no court yesterday—was that Miss Elliott, then lifting upstairs, brought down a paper with an account of the slaying of the elder Roper. Bert Roper would not go to telephone.

Today, continuing that sequence, Mrs. Fox said that she followed "Bert," but did not remember that he got out and returned to the flat with him after he telephoned.

Q.—And, after you left the store until you left him about 11.30 you had no conversation about his father's death? A.—No, sir.

She said the police came that night and took all of Roper's things, including $23 they found tucked under the rug in his room. She had never seen that money, she said.

PRESS CONNERY'S CASE AT CLINTON

Clinton, Sept. 27.—Efforts to drop the bribery charges against James H. Connery, former road commissioner, failed today at a hearing before Judge Jonathan Smith, who refused to accede to the request of Connery's counsel.

Connery is charged with larceny and with bribery. His case was continued until to-morrow. Today Town Counsel Michael A. Scanlon, who is conducting the case for the government, filed a bill of particulars, which was asked by counsel for Connery, charging that $375 was taken from the town's funds.

HOLD SERVICES FOR JOHN CALLAGHAN, 91

The funeral of John Callaghan, aged ninety-one, took place today from his home, No. 247 West Fifth street, South Boston. There was a high mass of requiem sung in St. Augustine's Church. The music was under the direction of Miss Helen M. Roche.

Mr. Callaghan was born in County Cork, Ireland, October 31, 1825. He came to Boston when a young man and entered the shoe business on West Fourth street. Forty years ago he retired from business and since then He lived with his daughter, Miss Minnie Callaghan.

FIFTY-FIFTY PLAN TO STOP DIVORCE

Providence, Sept. 27.—A fifty-fifty arrangement, which, if practiced by husbands and wives in their daily dealings with each other would reduce divorces to a minimum, was outlined by Judge Sweeney when he denied the petition of Ethel P. Bayles, music teacher and concert singer of Boston, for a divorce from James F. Sayles.

"When a man is nervous and out of sorts it is the duty of the wife to go to cheer him, and when a wife is nervous and out of sorts it is the duty of the husband to cheer her, and the sooner man and wife learn to practice this rule the fewer petitions for divorce will be filed in the courts."

WOBURN MAN KILLED BY TRAIN ON B. & M.

The body of Thomas J. Lowder, twenty-eight years, a patent leather worker of No. 5 Elm avenue, Woburn was found on the Boston & Maine Railroad tracks near the Winchester station, about 4.30 this morning. His body was mangled. The man had been killed during the night by a train.

A year ago his father, Michael Lowder, was crushed to death between two freight cars.

FLOUR AS HIGH AS DURING CIVIL WAR

Chicago, Sept. 27.—The price of flour was advanced 20 cents a barrel, the highest level since the Civil War.

Standard Minnesota patents sold for $8.10 a barrel, an increase of 75 over a year ago.

The cheaper grades of flour sold to bakers also was advanced 10 and 15 cents a barrel. Grades which yesterday sold for $8.50 brought $8.60 and $8.75 today.

MAY FIGHT WILL OF MURDERED LEMON KING

Mrs. Eugene Di Cola, the woman who lived for a number of years with the assassinated "Lemon King" as his wife, is contemplating an attempt to break the will he made on his death-bed, it was reported in legal circles today.

"Mrs. Di Cola" was left only $5,000 in cash, jewelry and furniture under the will, although it was also provided that Giuseppi Di Cola, brother of the deceased man, who receives the rest of the $500,000 estate left by Di Cola, should pay "Mrs. Di Cola" $100 a month during her life and allow her the rent-free of the flat she occupied. The remaining amount handed to Di Cola on Fairbanks street, Brookline.

MAY TRY TO BREAK WILL.

Mrs. Di Cola, it was said today, has talked the matter with friends and stated she will ascertain from lawyers if she has any prospects of securing at least one-third of Di Cola's estate, which she could claim under the law if she were his legal widow.

Close friends of "Mrs. Di Cola," as well as her son, Antonio Bova, the West End and Waltham barber, have expressed indignation at the small amount bequeathed to her in the will. Friends of hers are said to have already urged her to take legal action to secure a larger amount.

The Old Colony Trust Company has been named administrator under the will and two have appointed Samuel L. Hollis and Judge Frank Leverett, Tremont building, as their attorneys in the execution. They are prepared to contest any action by "Mrs. Di Cola" to break the will.

It was learned from an authoritative source today that by next Monday or Tuesday "Mrs. Di Cola" would definitely make known whether or not she intends to contest the will.

The use of the word "wife" in the will may help her in a contest and at the same time it may be used by relatives of the murdered man as a trick on which to deprive her of all benefits under the will should they prove that she was never married to Di Cola.

It was pointed out today that in Massachusetts and Italy there can be no common law marriage, as in many other States.

Relatives of the murdered man could not be found in court that as she was not his wife, Di Cola did not mean she should benefit under the will where he used the term "my wife."

It was declared today that unless "Mrs. Di Cola" can prove she was married to Di Cola since she secured a divorce decree last December from the husband she left twenty-three years before, she has no legal rights either in Massachusetts or Italy as the "wife" of Di Cola and must accept the will as it stands.

COMES TO CLAIM FORTUNE.

Guiseppi Di Cola, the principal beneficiary under the will, is now on his way to Boston from Italy, where he was considerable property.

The payment of $100 a month to Mrs. Di Cola will start immediately after the will is allowed, which will take about thirty days if it is not contested.

When the safety deposit vault rented by Di Cola at the old Colony Trust Company was opened, no papers or documents tending to throw any light on the mystery surrounding his murder were discovered.

The vault was opened in the presence of Judge Leverett, Attorney Hollen, Captain Dailey of Station 1 and Sergeant Frank Rutherford of the Brookline police and Detective Joseph Ferrari of Station 1, the two officers who have been conducting the investigation into Di Cola's murder.

ALONE ON STEAMER.

That he came over on the steamer from Palermo with Di Cola eleven-four years ago, and that Di Cola at that time was doing some kind of investment today of Joseph Comella, fruit dealer at No. 1274A Dorchester avenue.

Comella is a brother-in-law of Antone Bova, the son of "Mrs. Di Cola."

"I have known Di Cola ever since he came to Boston," said Comella. "I don't know where Mrs. Di Cola was at the time I came over but I do know that Di Cola was alone on the steamer."

Comella called on Mrs. Di Cola twice since the murder, once with his brother, Paul Comello, of Norman street, and once with his cousin.

"She says she did not know who did the shooting," said Comella. "She only saw the man as he was running away. She says Mr. Di Cola did not say who shot him before he died. It is rather peculiar that she was not with him when she was in Dorchester, and she was greatly broken up over the tragedy."

HONEYMOON OVER, SECRET IS TOLD

Announcement is made of the marriage at Wethersfield, Vt., on August 27 of Miss Gladys Hurley of Roxbury, private secretary to State Treasurer Charles L. Harrill, and Edward A. Sherman, a traveling salesman, son of ex-Alderman and Mrs. Frank J. Sherman of Bellevue avenue, Melrose.

So quiet have the young people kept their secret that not even the fellow employes of the bride have guessed that for over a month she has been Mrs. Sherman. The bride's employer was the only one told the secret.

The groom is the oldest of three sons of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman, the youngest of whom captains the Melrose High football team. His second son, while the second, Forest, is a junior at the United States Naval Academy.

MEXICAN SOLDIERS KILLED U. S. TROOPER

Washington, Sept. 27.—In the first official report to the War Department on the clash between American and Carranzista soldiers in an El Valle saloon September 22, General Pershing today stated that one American soldier was killed and another slightly wounded. A Carranza officer was killed and an enlisted man wounded. A board of officers is investigating.

30,000 Unwounded Germans, 644 Guns Taken on Somme

Paris, Sept. 27.—Since the battle of the Somme opened, says a semi-official account in the bulletin, the Allied the French have conquered about seventy square miles of territory, captured 30,000 unwounded prisoners, removed 14,000 wounded, and taken 144 guns, most of them of heavy calibre; 500 machine guns, and other material.

It is pointed out that the allies have broken the spirit of the defenders at Verdun, definitely deprived the enemy of an initiative, and turned it to their own favor.

Since the opening of the battle, this account says, the Germans have thrown into the battle sixty-seven new divisions and seventeen battalions, of which thirty-four divisions were on the English front and thirty-three divisions, with seventeen battalions were on the French front.

Movie Actor Is Named by Husband

Providence, Sept. 27.—Thomas Mc-Avoy, the moving picture star, is named in the Mansfield divorce case, in which Fred Mansfield, proprietor of the Crown Hotel of this city, seeks a divorce from his wife, Marjorie. All this became known today when the bill of particulars was made public.

The case, which was scheduled to begin today, was postponed after strong opposition by counsel for Mansfield.

Judge Stearns urged that the counsel on both sides confer with Judge Chester H. Barrows, who will preside at the hearing and arrange to have the case heard as soon as possible.

In the meantime, he ruled that Mansfield should pay his wife the allowance of $10 a week, that she has received since her separation.

The general opinion is that the case will not be contested. In his petition, Mansfield asks for the custody of his five-year-old daughter Marjorie, and that he be allowed a hearty to children.

If the case is contested, attorneys for Mansfield hinted today that there will be much sensational testimony.

Two High School Girls Play Truant

Two runaway high school girls from Brockton were returned to their parents this morning by the police of Station 2. When the Brockton schools opened Monday, the girls, aged thirteen and fifteen, played truant, and remained away from home. As a consequences, took the contents of their savings bank, $2, and came to Boston. After wandering around they stopped a youth in Dock square and asked him where they could hire a room. He directed them to a place in the North End, but they passed them by. Finally not liking the appearance of the house, they asked the address of a policeman, who notified Officer Manning.

CLEW TO ROBBERY IN DICTIONARIES

The police are looking for the owner of seventeen pill-edged, soul pocket dictionaries, which were being disposed of near a down-town book store by a man whose name was not given out. The police believe that if the owner can be found the dishonesty may lead to knowledge of a number of stolen express robbery somewhere. The seller, who was arrested, has a police record for grand larceny that began with the Massachusetts reformatory and ended in Sing Sing, with carpet ones in prisons in several States.

ASKS RECOUNT OF WINTHROP'S VOTE

G. Wallace Tibbetts, defeated Republican candidate for the nomination for Representative in Winthrop today petitioned for a recount. Winthrop Magee received 801 votes, as against 800 cast for Tibbetts.

Timothy Barter received 302 votes on the Democratic ticket. Tibbetts said:

"If the recount does not change the result, I and my friends will do our best to help elect Mr. Magee."

U. S. PROBE IS ON AS TO PRICE OF MILK

Washington, Sept. 27.—District Attorney Anderson of Boston conferred with Colonel Wood, Assistant Attorney-General in charge of trust prosecutions, regarding the complaint of Boston consumers that milk dealers had unreasonable advanced prices. After the conference it was said no action had been determined on, but that investigation of the situation would continue.

POLITICS LEADS CHILDREN ASTRAY

Cornelius and Mary Cowan of No. 28 Ash street, aged six and eight years, almost came to grief because of a desire to know something about Boston politics. Hand in hand, they ran away from home to watch the election bulletins on Newspaper row and could not find their way back. Officers from Station 2 took care of them until their parents were found.

Benson to Speak.

Allan L. Benson, the Socialist candidate for President, and Daniel A. White of Brockton, the Socialist candidate for Governor, will be the chief speakers at a rally in Tremont Temple tonight.

MRS. O'DONNELL PLAYED ROLE OF SLEUTH

Then Mrs. Emma E. O'Donnell delighted in playing the part of a private detective, according to stories she has told friends, since learned this afternoon by Attorney Frank N. Nay, counsel for the will, in the East Cambridge Probate Court, where the contest is being fought.

She told one friend on more than one occasion she played the part of a private detective," said Mr. Nay.

"She was particularly fond of a police inspector. It was because of her interest in the inspector and the liking she had for him, and he for her that she played the role of private detective.

IN ROLE OF DETECTIVE.

"She told me she was told by the inspector to go and get employment with a family. There had been a fire in their home, and they had to get work. She said, and people in the neighborhood of her but she got around in all right.

"She said she worked on a number of families for the inspector in this way.

On cross-examination by William Flaherty, Mr. Nay said he did not remember the name of the police inspector.

Attorney Nay testified that he drew up the second will of Mrs. O'Donnell, whom he knew as Mrs. Hostwick. Nay and Mr. Flaherty were friends and got work the said, and people in the neighborhood of her, but she got around in all right.

She said she worked on a number of families for the inspector in this way.

On cross-examination by William Flaherty, Mr. Nay said he did not remember the name of the police inspector.

...litical organization in Massachusetts ... been boosted into office by knocks like these.

FITZGERALD STATEMENT MISSING.

Mr. Mansfield's triumph, however, was said to have put the skids under John F. Fitzgerald's candidacy for the United States Senate, against Henry Cabot Lodge. Mr. Fitzgerald was not to be reached early today by telephone. He failed to appear with the customary "statement." The Republican organization appeared to be as stunned by this feature of the situation as if they had been in some fear that the former Mayor—with General Cole running for Governor—might have given Lodge something to worry about.

General Cole was promptly on deck with "congratulations and best wishes" for the man who defeated him. Today, the general was being talked about as the man above all others to nominate against James M. Curley, fourteen months hence, for Mayor of Boston. This was the smallest bit of gossip of the "morning after."

Except in spots, the primary was one of the slowest, dullest and least interesting on record. Leaving the candidates and their fathers, brothers, sons and brothers-in-law out of it, it is probably true that ten men in Massachusetts yesterday discussed the Red Sox and the Giants to every one who mentioned politics and politicians.

SOME SPIRITED CONTESTS.

There were, however, some spirited contests—in spots—and here, briefly chronicled, is how they turned out:

Fred Mansfield defeated Charles H. Cole, as above.

And the Republican State machine came in for a black eye, also, State Auditor Alonzo B. Cook, the referee for that household, walloping Joseph R. Brown. This makes Cook's third consecutive defeat of the Republican powers. His majority is about 10,000.

Frank Horgan, defeating James T. Kenney for the Democratic nomination, was picked by the Democrats of the Eleventh Congress District to again try his strength against that of Congressman George Holden Tinkham. The vote was: Horgan, 5,112; Kenney, 3,611; Horgan's plurality, 1,501.

Congressman Michael F. Phelan, of Lynn, Democrat, defeated William P. Conery, Jr., for the nomination. Charles Neal Barney, of Lynn, besting Charles Cabot Johnson, of Saharti, was selected by the Republicans as the boy to give Congressman Phelan a tussle.

SIX-CORNERED FIGHT.

Of all the Congressional contests, however, that in which the most interest was manifested was the six-cornered scramble of Fourteenth District Republicans for the honor of running against Congressman Richard Olney, 2d, of Dedham.

Colonel Henry L. Kincaide, the former Progressive leader, won the nomination. It was estimated, from the latest reports today, that he had defeated his nearest rival, Robert L. Raymond, who was chairman of the Special Commission on Military Education, by about 500 votes.

16—Ralph W. Crosby.	Joseph Walsh.

Cambridge today reported 1,752 for Deitrick against 1,187 for John F. Daly. The former congressman won the Democratic congressional nomination over Daly by about 600.

The Boston contest for the Governor's Council was a walk-over for the Hon. Timothy J. Buckley, the present incumbent. With each of his two rivals (P. E. Murray, Jr., and George J. Wall) polling about 5,000 votes, the Charlestown man ran up a string of 16,147. The nomination means an election.

That General Cole was lucky to get 17,382 votes in Boston yesterday against 21,576 for Mansfield is indicated by some other things that happened, one of them being that 12,552 inhabitants of our fair city voted in favor of taking the office of Register of Deeds away from William T. A. Fitzgerald and turning it over to William F. Doyle of East Boston. Mr. Fitzgerald polled 20,178 Democratic votes and now has both Republican and Democratic nominations.

In the contest for the Democratic nomination for clerk of the Superior Court for Civil Business, Francis A. Campbell, the incumbent, received 19,297 votes to 12,946 cast for Edward D. Collins. Mr. Campbell had an ace in his sleeve in the form of the Republican nomination.

State Senator James I. Green of the Charlestown-West End district, who had a perfect hectic day of it charging fraud and everything, was badly beaten by John L. Fitzgerald, Jr., Lomasney's newer favorite.

The Democratic vote in this Third Suffolk District was:

John L. Fitzgerald, 3,439.
James I. Green, 1,739.
M. Frank McGrath, 1,146.

But the five-reel, blood-and-thunder, Kline's-escape-on-the-ice feature of the Big Doings was the narrow escape of Senator "Diamond Jim" Timilty, of Roxbury. The boys have been threatening for years to get "Diamond Jim," but they never came so near it as yesterday, in the battle for the Democratic nomination in the Sixth Suffolk Senatorial:

James P. Timilty, 2,582.
William H. Sullivan, 2,275.
P. Joseph McManus, 1,885.

URGES EVERYONE TO QUICKLY GET ON WATER WAGON

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.—Advertisement.

SEND 10,000 MORE MEN TO BORDER

Washington, Sept. 27.—The War Department today ordered 10,000 additional coast artillerymen, infantrymen, cavalrymen and engineers of the National Guard from all parts of the United States to go to the Mexican border immediately.

A similar number of militia infantrymen now on the border will be released from service upon the arrival of the new troops.

It is understood that the Georgia cavalry, which has been ordered to go to the border, will succeed the Massachusetts cavalry. This movement of troops may release some, if not all, of the Massachusetts infantrymen.

The militia ordered to the border follows:

Eastern department—Field artillery, Battery A, New Hampshire; Third Penna; Battery C, New Jersey; Battery A, District of Columbia; First Battalion and Battery C, Virginia; Third New York; Batteries A and C, Alabama; First battalion, Georgia; Batteries B and F, Connecticut; Second Florida; Third, District of Columbia; Troop A, District of Columbia.

CUT THIS OUT

OLD ENGLISH RECIPE FOR CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you known someone who is troubled with head noises, or Catarrhal Deafness, cut out this formula, and hand it to them, and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. Recent experiments have proved conclusively that Catarrhal Deafness, head noises, etc., were the direct cause of the constitutional disease, and that salves, sprays, inhalers, etc., merely temporize with the complaint and seldom, if ever, effect a permanent cure. This being so, much time and money has been spent of late by a noted specialist in perfecting a pure, gentle, yet effective tonic that would quickly dispel all traces of the catarrhal poison from the system. The effective prescription which was eventually formulated, and which has aroused the belief that deafness will soon be extinct, is given below in understandable form, so that anyone can treat themselves in their own home at little expense.

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength), about 75c worth. Take this home and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 oz. of granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

The first dose should begin to relieve the distressing head noises, headach, dullness, cloudy thinking, etc., while the hearing rapidly returns as the system is invigorated by the tonic action of the treatment. Loss of smell and mucus dropping in the back of the throat, are other symtoms that show the presence of catarrhal poison, and which are often entirely overcome by this efficacious treatment. Nearly ninety per cent. of all ear troubles are directly caused by catarrh; therefore, there must be many people whose hearing can be restored by this simple home treatment.

Every person, who is troubled with head noises, catarrhal deafness, or catarrh in any form, should give this prescription a trial.—Advertisement.

REFUSES TO LEAD A GERMAN OPERA

By International News Service.

New York, Sept. 27.—Pierre Monteux, who arrived here Monday on a six months' furlough from the French army to conduct the orchestra for the Diaghileff ballet, declared he absolutely would not appear at performances of Richard Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel," which has been prepared at the sensation of the season. So, with the opening at the opera house only two weeks away, officials are combing the city for a conductor not opposed to German music.

WHAT DYSPEPTICS SHOULD EAT

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

"Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble are, nine times out of ten, due to acidity; therefore stomach sufferers should, whenever possible, avoid eating food that is acid in its nature, or which by chemical action in the stomach develops acidity. Unfortunately, such a rule eliminates most foods which are pleasant to the taste as well as those which are rich in blood, flesh and muscle building properties. This is the reason why dyspeptics and stomach sufferers are usually thin, emaciated and lacking in that vital energy which can only come from a well fed body.

"For the benefit of those sufferers who have been obliged to exclude from their diet all starchy, sweet or fatty food, and are trying to keep up a miserable existence on gluten products, I would suggest that you should try a meal of any food or foods which you may like, in moderate amount, taking immediately afterwards a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little hot or cold water. This will neutralize any acid which may be present, or which may be formed, and instead of the usual feeling of sluggishness and fullness, you will find that your food agrees with you perfectly.

"I know of nothing better than plain bisurated magnesia as a food corrective and antacid. It has no direct action on the stomach; but by neutralizing the acidity of the food contents, and thus removing the source of the acid irritation which inflames the delicate stomach lining, it does more than could possibly be done by any drug or medicine.

"As a physician, I believe in the use of medicine whenever necessary, but I must admit that I cannot see the sense of dosing an inflamed and irritated stomach with drugs instead of getting rid of the acid—the cause of all the trouble. Get a little bisurated magnesia from your druggist, eat what you want at your next meal, take some of the bisurated magnesia as directed above, and see if I'm not right."

PASTOR JOINS SUNDAY DEFENCE

Billy Sunday is a clown! The Unitarians in their weekly paper "The Christian Register," say so, and add that he is "an old fashioned clown. He is the real funny fellow in the painted face, peaked hat and voluminous trousers."

This has upset the many admirers of Billy Sunday and there is no end of talk in Boston by ministers of all denominations of this caustic application of Sunday. The passage which stirred comment is as follows:

Taking Billy Sunday as a clown development of our modern life, he is worth seeing. He gives the value of your money, which is not taken at the door, but is asked in a "collection." He belongs, but slightly, to the devout service-rendering religious life of today, but should be classed sociologically among the vaudeville performers. He is the normal evolution of the funny fellow in painted face, peaked hat and voluminous trousers, whom we know and enjoyed, with the popcorn and peanuts, long, long ago.

TAKES THE PRIZE.

"Of all that has been said against Billy Sunday, this Unitarian comment takes the prize," said the Rev. Dr. D. M. Lockrow of Tremont Temple.

"This is simply unchristian, uncalled for and beats to a frazzle anything that Billy Sunday has said in public against Unitarians. When Billy Sunday hears this, he can't be held in, and I for one don't blame him.

"I thought our good Unitarian friends were going to keep silent, but here is one of the best known Unitarian ministers, the Rev. Bradley Gilman, coming out in print against a man who is thoroughly sincere and honest in his convictions.

"Would you blame him for pitching into such language as the Unitarians have used against him? No man believes more in the work he is doing than Billy Sunday.

LOST THEIR DIGNITY.

"He has turned thousands into the right way. He has cleaned up city after city and made husbands act better toward their wives, he has purified home after home and given peace and joy to many a family.

"Can a clown do this? Can a clown save thousands of people to think of God and join some churches and lead a right life?

"I did not think the Unitarians could lose their dignity in this way, to allow their representative paper to come and mark a good sincere man like this.

"This will add to the reputation of Billy Sunday. They called Christ a drunkenness man, wine bibber and friend of sinners. Billy Sunday is in good company, isn't he?"

JEWS USHER IN THE YEAR 5677

By ALEXANDER BRIN.

The blast of the trumpet calls 100,000 Jews of Greater Boston and 14,000,000 all over the world to the synagogues and temples tonight for the opening of the Jewish nlendar year 5677. The festival this year will be to pray for the re-establishment of peace in Europe.

At no time in Jewish history have the holy days been approached with greater sadness than this year, when after months of struggle and conflict, peace is still far from the world and no great a portion of the Jewish people are in desperate need and sorrow.

The conflict across the sea will figure largely in the messages of this year. On account of the toll of war there are many Jewish families in Greater Boston, waiting with much foreboding for greetings which may never come.

Laborers, merchants and professional men, the poor and wealthy, will approach each other at sundown today with the old greeting, "L'shono Tova T'kosev," "May you be inscribed in the Book of Life for a good year."

At sundown the grandfather or the oldest member of the family blesses the rest of the family before leaving for the synagogue. At the synagogues all kneel in prayer, giving thanks for the gifts of last year and asking divine blessing for this year.

The observance of the Jewish New Year is commanded in the two passages of the Five Books of Moses. In neither passage is there any command as to how the day is to be observed beyond blowing the trumpet, holding a holy convocation and engaging in no servile occupation.

Boston's Greatest SHOE SALE

Opens Tomorrow Morning at . . . SHEINWALD'S 40 Summer St.

I want to demonstrate to the public that I, with my tremendous buying power, will do more for the people of Boston and vicinity in low prices for shoes than any other retailer in New England. Now I am giving you the reason for this gigantic Opening Sale. It is to protect the people who have patronized me for the past 10 years against the terrible rise in the prices of shoes.

It's true that the leather market is rising—and it's true that the average shoe dealer is obliged to raise his prices—BUT AT 40 SUMMER ST.

The Public Can Still Buy Shoes at the Same Old Low Prices

Months ago I anticipated the present high leather market, and placed my order in advance for thousands and thousands of dollars' worth of shoes with the best manufacturers at the lowest prices. I don't buy "from hand to mouth" like the ordinary retail shoe dealer—I BUY BIG—I BUY LOW—My trade is accustomed to high grade shoes at the lowest prices—and I MUST KEEP UP MY REPUTATION FOR LOW PRICES. Don't waste your money by paying high prices for shoes—SAVE IT. Come to 40 Summer Street tomorrow morning.

WM. SHEINWALD

SENTENCE 11 IN CHELSEA STRIKE

Four strikers from the Walton Shoe Company's shops were given House of Correction sentences by Judges Bosson and Cutle in sessions of the Chelsea court today for assaulting strike-breakers. Seven others were fined or put under bonds.

Paul Kiriluk was given three months for assaulting Orie G. Barnes and Paul Lyneuk. This was Kiriluk's ninth appearance before the court since the strike began. He was given six months Monday and now has three sentences appealed.

John Yanchuck was given two months for assaulting Paul Lyneuk, whom Kiriluk also assaulted. Joseph Kukolovich received thirty days for attacking an unknown person and Adam Dembroski the same for assaulting Helen Caltsem of Lynn, a strike-breaker. All appealed.

Peter Nestchuck was fined one cent and put under $100 bonds to keep the peace. Five other strikers were fined a total of $50.

SIXTY FAMILIES IN FIRE PERIL AROUSED

Pittsburgh, Sept. 28.—Awakened by smoke, Miss Nellie Brislin early today ran through Carson street in her night clothes arousing sixty families in a block of tenements which had caught fire. The block was destroyed with $60,000 loss. Before leaving her own home Miss Brislin carried her aged mother to safety.

THOUSANDS OUT TO AID CARMEN

By FRANK CHARLTON

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

New York, Sept. 27.—With more than 176,000 men and women trade unionists idle, the general walkout in sympathy with the striking traction workers was launched today amid increased violence. Labor leaders this afternoon predicted that more than a quarter of a million workers would be involved in the strike by tomorrow night.

Of those who quit work today about 120,000 are members of the United Hebrew trades who would have been celebrating the event on account of the Jewish holiday. It could not be definitely told how many of those had actually struck.

Many surface and elevated cars were attacked and there were numerous arrests. A Lexington avenue and a Broadway car, both manned by strike-breakers, collided and a dozen persons were hurt. An attempt to derail a Sixth avenue car was frustrated.

There was a bomb scare early in the day but the supposed infernal machine, which was picked up on the tracks on 110th street, proved to be a giant firecracker.

Labor leaders declared they had won a strategic point when 1,000 members of the eccentric firemen's union, many of whom are employed in power houses, voted to join the strike.

Twenty thousand members of the teamsters' council voted to quit on Thursday, and strike leaders claimed that 25,000 unionists among the brewery workers, sheet metal workers and wagon drivers had been won over.

COUNTRY COUPLE LOST IN BOSTON

After an anxious night, Mr. and Mrs. John LeGro of Farmington, N. H., were reunited at Police Station 7 this morning. Late yesterday afternoon in the crowds in the business section they became separated. Mr. LeGro took a room at the Quincy House and made half hourly trips to the station for news.

Mrs. LeGro, who is sixty-four years old, did not think of the police as a help, but remembering that her husband did business with a firm on Bromfield street, went there early this morning and enlisted their aid.

Martin Battles Dead.

Martin Battles, for ten years engineer at the North Bennett Street Industrial School, died in his apartments in the school building. He came here from County Sligo, forty-three years ago. Funeral services will be held Friday morning in St. Stephen's Church, North End.

RICH FIGHT PARK DRIVE BUILDING

Wealthy residents along the Lynn Shore Drive were so incensed today when workmen of the Metropolitan Park Commission brought tools and materials to build the $10,000 comfort station at a point on the Drive opposite King's road, instead of at the King's Beach end, that they made plans to protest in person to the Metropolitan Park Commissioners.

Among the residents nearest the proposed location of the station are James F. Phelan, his brother, Congressman Michael F. Phelan; Governor Charles Carter Stuart of Virginia, Summer resident; Ralph S. Bauer, J. J. Gruver, Mrs. Catherine Hines, head of the Federation of Catholic Societies of Lynn; John H. Madden and other men and women of financial and social prominence.

The appropriation for a $10,000 station was fathered on Beacon Hill by Representative Charles A. Annis of Lynn, who was renominated yesterday. Mr. Annis called for a location at the King's Beach end of the fashionable Drive, where there is no residential property.

There was talk today that the Metropolitan Park Commission did not wish to erect this station, and that work had been delayed. Finally, when work began, Shore Drive residents were staggered to find that the station is to be put up on the water-front side of the Drive and opposite King's road, a quarter-mile down shore from King's Beach.

If erected there it will be the only structure on the waterfront side of the entire Shore Drive. The waterfront side has been kept unobstructed so far and costly residences have been erected on the other side, making the Drive one of the most beautiful highways in the State.

FINDS BOYS UNDER 14 WORK ON DUMP

Inspector John R. Dexter of the State Board of Labor and Industries was the complainant in the South Boston court today against Thomas A. Berry, superintendent of the city dump off Northampton street, who pleaded guilty to employing boys under 14 years of age. Judge Day fined the charge with the understanding that Berry will not employ boys under the required age in the future.

SOUTH BOSTON GIRL WEDS PEABODY MAN

Geneva A. Macdonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Macdonald, of No. 552 East Fifth street, South Boston, and Leander A. Macdonald, teacher-coach of the Centre School of Peabody, were united at a nuptial mass at the Gate of Heaven Church, this morning, by Rev. George A. Lyons. The bridesmaid was Miss Maud Macdonald, a sister of the bride, and the best man was Fred O'Brien, teacher-coach of the English High School.

Don't Let Soap Spoil Your Hair

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.—Advertisement

BAY STATE BOYS ON BORDER READY FOR FIFTEEN-DAY HIKE

By BERT FORD.

El Paso, Tex., Sept. 27.—Instead of going home, the Massachusetts forces on the border are to march to the Apache reservation near Alamogordo, N. M., next week and spend fifteen days on the road.

The boys in khaki will get a taste of conditions while an army is advancing over the arid lands and mountains of Texas and New Mexico. All the Bay State troops, save the Second Regiment at Columbus, numbering 7,400, will take part in the hike and maneuvers of the Tenth Army Division, commanded by General Morton.

With the Massachusetts units in the Morton division will be the Ohio and Kentucky troops and regulars, numbering close to 26,000 all told. Orders to participate in the march were received by the Second Massachusetts Brigade, the Massachusetts artillery, cavalry, signal, hospital and ambulance corps.

START ON SUNDAY.

The start from El Paso will take place Sunday or Monday. The division will travel in battle equipment and eat and bivouac as it goes. The objective reservation is nearly 100 miles from El Paso. The problem will be to move an army over the rough, dry country of the border and to study how it cares for itself, how it stands the rigors of the journey and how it would protect itself from attack. Water supply will be the most baffling feature.

It will be the nearest approach to actual war conditions that the Massachusetts soldiers ever experienced. The officers are looking forward to the hike with eagerness, but the rank and file of the men are not, because they are disgruntled over the punctured rumors that they would be homeward bound instead of trudging through deserts.

The dissatisfaction of the men has become a problem the last week. They were keyed up to start home and their relatives were so sure that they have stopped writing, and now comes the toughest two weeks of the tour. The men feel that they have been duped. Many are threatening to "scout over the hills," but it is hoped that the departure from camp monotony will banish discontent.

DESOLATE MEXICO.

There is no part of Mexico more desolate than sections through which the Massachusetts troops will pass. After miles of cactus dotted deserts, the army will pass through the salt cliffs that glisten white in the hot sun, and when they reach their destination they will be 9,000 feet above the sea.

General Sweetzer tendered General Bell a review of the Second Brigade late yesterday. General Bell inspected camp and stayed for mess.

The Ninth and the Eighth held a mimic war on the Mesa. When it was over a clash was narrowly averted when the Eighth men shouted "yellow Ninth." L Company halted, reversed guns and might have attacked if Major Casey had not intervened. Major Casey challenged any of the Eighth's men to step forward and find out how much yellow could be found in the ranks of the Ninth, but the challenge was not accepted and officers apologized.

The First and Second battalions of the artillery held their first tactical engagement with powder and it proved spectacular. Both remained out over night and guarded bills and river. The cavalry had saber practice, the men slashing at dummies as they galloped full speed.

It was reported today that Major Barry of the Ninth and Lieutenant Kittredge are to resign for business reasons.

There Will Be an Odor of Kerosene About Milady's Hair

By International News Service.

Washington, Sept. 27.—Hair tinters are fearful lest in the near future an ineradicable odor of kerosene will linger about many of the "rats," transformations, frizzes and false bangs worn by feminine customers.

Much of the hair now used comes from China. Since the war began it has been brought direct across the Pacific. The United States Public Health Service has decreed that all future shipments must be dipped in kerosene. The importers claim the kerosene smell of the hair from Chinese ports will alleviate their customers.

American women are buying more hair now than ever before. One million pounds of it was brought in from China alone during the last fiscal year.

Clark Gets Six Months in Prison

Columbus, N. M., Sept. 27.—Private Hugh Clark of D Company of Holyoke was given a dishonorable discharge and sentenced to six months' imprisonment at hard labor. The verdict of a general court-martial board that tried him recently on charges that he misrepresented camp conditions in a newspaper article has been returned with the approval of General Pershing and the War Department.

He will be taken to Fort Bliss immediately and then transferred to the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth, where his sentence begins upon his arrival. In addition to this punishment, Clark forfeits all pay and allowances due him as a soldier.

John J. McClellan of the Massachusetts Treasury Department arrived here and began listing men of the Second Regiment for the monthly allowance of $10 which the Legislature has voted Bay State National Guardsmen. This additional State pay is retroactive to the date when the men were mustered into the federal service and means a lump sum of $30 per soldier for those who mobilized at Framingham three months ago.

Eighth Regiment Gives a Concert

By BOB ALLEN.

El Paso, Sept. 27.—Following the brigade review tendered to General Bell, the Eighth Regiment band gave a concert at General Sweetser's quarters, and Mrs. Bell. This morning two battalions of the Eighth went to the range of the Pennsylvania troops at Camp Pershing. These were made up of men who had not previously shot. Practices at battle sight and slow ranges were held. Lieutenant Carl M. Tobey has been confined to his quarters because of a stomach illness and will be indisposed for a few days.

MARTINE DEFEATS WILSON'S FRIEND

By International News Service.

New York, Sept. 27.—Returns early today in the New Jersey primaries show Senator James E. Martine has decisively defeated Attorney-General John W. Wescott, President Wilson's candidate for the Democratic Senatorial nomination. The latest figures show a majority of 6,157 for Martine in 723 districts, including the home counties of both candidates, Essex and exclusive of Hudson County, where Martine appears to be winning by approximately four to one.

This defeat of the man who nominated Mr. Wilson for the presidency and who had the full support of the administration against Martine is the outstanding feature of the Jersey primaries. The vote was the heaviest cast in many years except in presidential elections. In some counties it was 50 per cent. larger than usual.

Representative John Capstick, bitterly opposed because of his "peace at any price" tendencies, appears to have been renominated.

In the Republican side State Senator Walter E. Edge has a safe majority over Colonel Austen Colgate for the gubernatorial nomination.

A close and quick race, the closest in its whole campaign, is that between Joseph H. Frelinghuysen and Frank O. Morgan for the United States Senatorial nomination. Frelinghuysen is receiving Senator Smith's support, Morgan Governor Murphy's. The vote early this morning:

	Frelinghuysen	Morgan
Hudson	1,000	1,000
Essex	1,000	1,000

MAN HELD AFTER GIRL IS ATTACKED

Hinman Large, twenty-one, of Center street, Winchester, was held on a grand jury in the Woburn police court today after he was charged on the charge of attempted attack on Miss Gladys Matthews of Winchester. Large was arrested by reason of a letter written to the Winchester police which was dated at Lynn, a part of which Large was committed to jail.

Cunningham in Railroad Chair

William J. Cunningham, professor of railroad transportation in the Harvard Graduate school, has been chosen by the Harvard Overseers for the new James J. Hill chair of railroad transportation. The appointment was announced today.

The Hill professorship was started in June 1915, by contributions of J. J. Hill, Louis W. Hill and Walter J. Hill, amounting to $125,000. This was doubled by $125,000 additional from Mr. Hill himself in December. Since then Mr. Hill has died.

Professor Cunningham is the first occupant of the Hill chair, with its quarter-million dollar endowment.

Automatic Alarm False.

The automatic fire alarm in Barker's flower store at No. 4 Chapman place sounded nearly 100 times without several pieces of apparatus responding. No fire could be found and it is believed some defect in the wiring caused the alarm to ring.

12 U. S. Warships Convoy Germans

Newport News, Sept. 27.—A dozen United States warships will convoy the German merchantmen Kronprinz Wilhelm and Prinz Eitel Friedrich from Norfolk to Philadelphia on Friday, one of the steamers will make the trip under her own steam, while the other will be towed by tugs.

The New Hampshire, one of the battleships which will convoy the German ships, came into Hampton Roads late yesterday. The other warships are expected today.

Marine men assert that the reason for such a large convoy for the liners is that the ships will have to go outside the three mile limit.

The prisoners will be taken from their berths at the Portsmouth, Va., navy yard Thursday afternoon and will be ready for the trip to Philadelphia.

The Present High Cost of Living—Has Its Effect On the Piano Trade But—I Will Not Raise My Prices

To Lose Money--Is Sometimes Part of My Selling Plan

IT'S a mighty poor business that can't take a loss occasionally to avoid raising prices on the public—Just at present with prices on everything soaring sky high, it would be perfectly legitimate for me to increase prices on pianos all along the line—not only would I have a right to do it, but, considering the present market, I ought to do it. But I am not going to do it. I can see further ahead in this business than today or tomorrow. If I couldn't, believe me I would not be in the piano business now. If I have to take a loss during this season of high prices—I'll take it. And every man or woman who buys a piano from me at my present low quotations will be a living advertisement for me in the future and a friend for life. You remember what I told you about friendships—well, the big idea with me is to make a friend. I hereby promise the public to keep piano prices down—away down. Come out here to this big sale of the finest pianos in the world and let me show you how to save a lot of money.

First Game Oct. 7 Says Big Ban

Chicago, Sept. 27.—That the World's Series will start Saturday, October 7, is the prediction made by President B. B. Johnson of the American League. "I am almost certain that the World's Series will start October 7, although the contestants might be willing to play on the 6th, but I hardly think so," said Johnson.

"The American League race closes a day earlier than the National, so of course we are willing to start October 7. I do not think that would be fair to the National League winner, however, if it looks as if the opening game will be played on Friday instead of Saturday.

"The White Sox still have a chance but of course in the National League it will be an Eastern team."

SEEK GIANT AS NEW MILWAUKEE HEAD

Milwaukee, Sept. 27.—Al Timme, president of the Milwaukee team of the American Association, announces that the next manager of the team will be a graduate of the New York National League club. The identity of the player is a secret, as Timme refuses to disclose his name. He stated, however, that negotiations will be started immediately to land him.

The man, according to Timme, is a close friend of McGraw and the New York manager praises the man highly. Timme's friends insist that the next manager will be either Mike Doolan or Hans Lobert.

JABS AND JOLTS

VIC MORAN, the New Orleans lightweight, who lost a close decision to Johnny O'Leary, the Seattle Flash, at the Arena last night, will box Harlem Bartley, Billy Meyers' conqueror, at Woonsocket next Monday night.

IT certainly is going to be a busy week for Leo. T. Flynn's training camp. Tuesday night comes back to Boston, going on with Mel Coleman of Brooklyn, in the semi-final to the Lew Tendler-Johnny Kilbane feature. Billy Wallace, lightweight championship of Connecticut, at New Haven.

JIMMY COPPEY and Young Jack O'Brien will clash before the National A. C. of Marieville, on Providence's Hearts, tonight. Coffey was at the Arena last night, being on hand under the guidance of his manager, as noted Join the Barber of Big Broadway.

FREDDIE YELLE of Taunton and Mike Crowley of Malden top Friday night's card at the Commercial A. C.

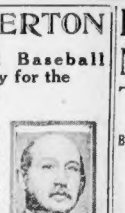
CAMP AND FULLERTON

World Famous Football and Baseball Experts Writing Exclusively for the Boston American.

Hugh Fullerton



Walter Camp

The two greatest sports in the country in popular appeal are baseball and football. The two men in the country who qualify as real experts in these sports are Hugh Fullerton and Walter Camp. Fullerton has begun writing "World's Series Dope" for the AMERICAN, and Walter Camp, dean of American football men, will begin in the Sunday AMERICAN a series of articles on the football year.

No one knows any more about football in theory and practice than Walter Camp, and the man, who for years kept Yale at the top of the football heap, is recognized so universally as an authority that the "All-American Team," which he picks, is recognized as having "official" weight.

Therefore, Walter Camp is the most valuable football writer in the country; and, in arranging to give his articles to its readers, the AMERICAN believes it has lived up to the AMERICAN tradition: "Give only the best to your readers."

Camp's articles, dealing particularly with football, but touching upon many other fields of sports, will begin exclusively in the Sunday AMERICAN.

PLAYING THE WORLD'S SERIES WITH HUGH S FULLERTON

Here is the fourth of a series of expert articles on the World's Series games by Hugh S. Fullerton, the celebrated baseball statistician, in which he compares the right fielders who may take part in the great title contests. Fullerton's World's Series stories will be a feature of the daily and Sunday AMERICAN.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

It seems to me, in studying the figures of the three leading clubs of each league player for player, that there is a decline in the individual ability and efficiency of outfielders that finds no explanation. It appears that the older and better ones are gradually sliding backward, and that the new men are not up to the established standards.

The game appears to be going forward in other lines, but the outfielders are not developing rapidly. A glance down the batting averages will show that I mean every club from anything else. Take five players out of the two major leagues, and the remainder of the outfielders will be scarcely up to big league possibilities.

A decade or two ago, we supposed that an outfielder ought to be close to a .300 hitter to earn his pay, and now we find a dozen of them down below the .250 mark.

CRAWFORD HAS LOST PUNCH.

Among the right fielders, as we compare them, we find some odd things. We discover, to our sorrow, that the best ones are giving way to time. Sam Crawford, that portly, middle-aged gentleman who has honored the game by his presence and driven many young pitchers to drink and the bushes again, no longer is the terror he was to American League boxmen.

One would imagine that we would have to figure Sam as having slipped way back, and so calculate upon his work in the World's Series. Don't do it, friends! Don't do it! The truth is that Sammy is not as effective as he once was against American League pitchers.

This is partly because he is slipping back a little and more largely because the American League twirlers are losing some of their awe of him. Do not imagine, however, that the National League pitchers will have anything on Samiwl.

Besides that, Sam has rounded into shape very slowly, and he is just getting good, and, if he is lucky enough to smash into the World's Series, ought to be in mid-season form about October 8.

HOOPER DRAWS PRAISE.

The best of them all is Harry Hooper. This fellow never has been a highly press-agented player. He is quiet, efficient and a great ball player who does his work with such a lack of showiness that it is only noticeable in the final figures. He is not a great hitter, but he is there in the pinch.

He is one of the quiet, thinking, determined fellows who do the right things in the right order. Last Fall he cut loose and did a little of the sensational, and became co-hero with Duffy Lewis. These two split the star stuff. He is going just as steadily this year as ever before. He hits good pitching well and poor pitching hard.

Chicago would present an assortment of right fielders—some of them very efficient. Rowland probably would use one against one team, one against another, and switch as he found his handpicked pitchers change. Shano Collins is a slashing, swinging hitter, who hits poor pitching with terrific effect and good pitching not at all. The switch would be to Fournier, and it is a problem in my mind as to whether the big Frenchman would not be a better man in such a series.

FOURNIER HAS BEEN RUINED.

Fournier is a whale of a hitter and a fair ball player if let alone. Opposing teams have discovered that they can throw him into the air and make him forget whether he is playing ball or pinochle. They have made a bad ball player of him at times by tantalizing him. In a World's Series no such tactics are usually tolerated, and it might be that he would be a world beater. Collins would not be likely to do much in such a series, especially against Philadelphia.

The National League right fielders do not appear to be of any sensational class Stengel, despite his tendency toward erratic uncertainty, is the best of the lot and the most effective. Cravath has this season ceased to be the hero that he was last year. Gavvy never was a great ball player, but he is a long driving hitter and a dangerous one especially on his own band-box grounds where the fences are short and the walls high.

The Red Sox pitchers were tipped last year as to how to work on him, and they uncovered batting weaknesses that the National League pitchers either did not know or lacked the stuff to attack. They stopped him. He would not be much more effective against the Red Sox than he was last year, but he certainly looks good as revealed against either the White Socks or Detroit pitchers.

Wilhoit, should the Braves get into the big money, would not be a big factor at all—nor would Connolly. Stallings' outfield material does not appear dangerous at any part of the game. Wilhoit cannot hit enough to do much damage, even allowing for the natural deficit in batting under the Stallings' system of playing the game.

Beyond Hooper, who is classy, steady and, at times brilliant, and Crawford, who has gone back, there is little class to the right fielders and nothing sensational may be expected from them to turn the tide of a series. The difference in paper strength between them is not sufficient to affect the final outcome materially.

Tomorrow we will take up the first baseman.

EVERS IN NO MOOD TO SCARE

Braves Star Not Disturbed by Reports of Blackhanders' Threats.

"There is nobody in the world who can scare $5,000 out of me," said Johnny Evers, second baseman for the Boston National baseball team, today, in discussing the story to the effect that he had received a blackhand letter in which a threat was made on his daughters life if he did not pay over $5,000.

Evers said that he himself did not receive the letter, but that possibly his wife, who is at their home in Troy, N. Y. may have gotten it. "I have not heard from my wife as yet," said Evers, "but there must be some mistake in the report of the story, because I have no daughter, she died about a year ago. I have a little boy, however, and it may be whose life is threatened.

"If they want to kidnap me I'll tell them where they can get me at any time of the day or night. But when they start to threaten my boy that is another matter. I have received many scolding love letters in my day, but this is the first one that has ever received a second thought from me. I don't know what to think of it until I hear from my wife."

According to the reports the letter in question was written on the back of an envelope addressed by C. W. Fox & Co. of New York city to Jesse H. Leonard, real estate dealer of Albany, N. reader."

"To Johnny Evers, baseball player:

"If you do not give us $5,000 in two days we will kill your daughter. If you fail to the consequences are ——— don't fail. If you think we are fooling you you will find out.

CHASE IS ASSURED OF TITLE FOR N. L. BATTING

Rogers Hornsby of the Cardinals lost two points Tuesday. The day as a whole, however, was productive of mild batting among the quartet striving for the batting championship in the National League.

Hal Chase, the leader, Jake Daubert and Zach Wheat neither gained nor lost appreciably. Chase is twenty-five points ahead of his nearest competitor and is practically assured of the title. Hornsby failed to make a hit in four times at bat and dropped from .313 to .311.

Each of the others struck one safe blow. Chase was up three times, Wheat four times and Daubert three times. Daubert retained a fraction of a point on Wheat, with whom he was tied for second place.

The figures on Tris Speaker and Ty Cobb remained the same as Monday; there were no games played in the American League.

Here is the standing of the four leaders in the National League:

	At Bat.	Hits.	Aver.	Gain or Loss.
Chase	529	177	.344	0
Daubert	554	185	.319	0
Wheat	545	174	.319	0

Noble Sox Back Home On with Donovan Clan

By JOHN W. MORAN, JR.

Fresh from their wonderful swing around the Johnsonian circuit, Jim Carrigan's flock of the World's Champions today tackle Wild Bill Donovan's Yankees in a game which may settle the American League pennant. A Red Sox victory, coupled with losses in Cleveland and St. Louis on the part of Chicago and Detroit, should make fairly clear the actual identity of the American League pennant winner.

From the viewpoint of the Boston fan there's nothing to it but the Lannin-Carrigan entry, and, considering the matter impartially, we cannot see a thing to prevent Manager Bill and his mates from landing Joe Lannin another gonfalon and a crack at the big money.

The Red Sox have come back from a swing in which twenty-five games were played. Sixteen resulted in victories, eight were losses, and one was a tied contest. In the face of the strongest possible opposition, Carrigan and his men battled their way into the lead and are now rightly entitled to all the honors Boston fandom bestows on them.

As was predicted in these columns, the Red Sox went into the homes of their most dangerous contenders, and, by playing clean, hard and aggressive baseball, knocked the pennant hopes of the White Sox and Tygers into a cocked hat, so to speak.

'TWAS HISTORY REPEATING.

The club repeated history which has taught us that never has either a Chicago or Detroit team beaten the men led by Carrigan when something important hinged on the result.

Today a goodly delegation of true Boston fans will wend their way to Fenway Park for the purpose of honoring Carrigan and his heroes. They will in all probability see either Ernie Shore or Carl Mays on the hill, while it seems as though Donovan will use either Mogridge, his good left-hander, or Bob Sharkey, another extremely troublesome chucker. Fans must not regard it as a cinch for the Sox to land the majority of the games to be played with the Yankees. They may possibly prove a mighty tough ball club before the series ends.

It doesn't seem as though Jack Barry would be in the game. Manager Bill will prefer to allow Jack to rest his injured hand just as long as possible. Janvrin did mighty well on the important trip and will continue to perform at the middle station for days to come. When Barry next gets back into the fray, he will be in the proverbial pink of condition and fit for any sort of a battle.

SCOTT A RIOT ON ROAD.

Everett Scott is one who made the swing around the circuit we receive the information that Everett Scott played a shortstop of the most sensational variety. Nothing that came his way had for the Youngstown kid, and the plays he turned were really wonderful. Scott hasn't hit at all well this year, but any ball club can afford to have a weak hitter or two, providing said weak hitter is fielding in almost perfect fashion.

Carrigan's batting staff comes back to town in fine condition, and strong for the games that will clinch the title; in fact, they are keen for the big clash, and, by judicious working, Manager Bill will have them in tip-top shape the day time is called in the clash that means the big or little end of the big baseball series.

Yesterday the Sox rested, a majority of them attending the double-header at Braves' Field and renewing acquaintances with players on both the Braves and Pirates.

President Lannin has completed arrangements whereby the Red Sox games in the big series will be played at Braves' Field.

This assures the club owners, National Commission and players a seating capacity that will bring $94,000, or thereabouts a game into the fun. In all, about 40,000 can be seated, and, under the improved plan of arrangements, there will be no difficulty attached to getting in or out of the park during the big clash.

SMITH IS STAR AT YALE

Scores Sensational Touchdown After Receiving Kickoff on the Fifteen-Yard Line.

New Haven, Sept. 27.—Yale's second-string backfield was placed on the Varsity eleven and scored four touchdowns. Quarterback Travis Smith, Halfbacks Neville and Waite and Fullback Jacques each took the ball over.

Smith's tally was the most sensational of the lot. He caught a kick-off at the varsity fifteen-yard line and ran back through a broken field the entire distance for a score.

"Chub" Sheldon, the veteran tackle, who returned to the squad from the Yale Artillery Battalion, was in the line-up for the first time this Fall, but retired after fifteen minutes in favor of Charley Tait. Art Gates and "Buck" Church were tried out as ends by the varsity. Henry Hobbs was the only coaching addition.

The Harvard varsity spanked the second team to the resounding thump of 27-0 behind the six-foot fence that separates the Crimson gridiron squad from the rest of the Harvard world.

Touchdowns were scored by Eddie Casey, Tom Thacher, Ralph Horween and Mark Horne. Mose Taylor kicked goal after Casey's pretty struggle across the goal line, while Horween and Horne did the honors for themselves after their tallies.

Coach Leary and his staff frequently called time during the hour's play to hammer home some necessary truths about the art of correct football, while an individual was occasionally taken to task for being out of position on formations, or too easily baffled by the wily offence of Bob Guild's troubadours.

The shift that sent Ralph Horween to Team B's backfield was a genuine surprise. Horween is the only seasoned back on the squad and has the physique and stamina necessary for a powerful line-plunger.

Bill Hitchcock, whose brother, Rex, stands high in Harvard's football gallery, played in Horween's position at left half. The Hawlian youngster has been coming fast during the past week. He is just as strong and fearless as his illustrious predecessor and somewhat frikster, but he will find plenty of fight on his hands to retain the place.

"Hank" Flower was handed a holiday and Casey played his role at fullback. Casey, though slight of build, gives promise of being as good as any Crimson back of a decade for squirming and tugging his way through the opposing rushline.

The right coaching should make this Natick cyclone an All-American half before he passes out of football.

Moseley Taylor was shifted to the left side of the line, ranging himself next to Captain Dunbar, while George Caser crossed over to right tackle.

N. Y. MAY LOSE BIG GAMES

To Hold Intercollegiate Championships in Philadelphia Unless Gotham Track Is Repaired.

New York, Sept. 27.—New York is likely to lose the indoor intercollegiate championships this Winter. Unless the company that owns Madison Square Garden assures the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America that it will provide a new floor, the annual relay carnival will be staged elsewhere, probably in Convention Hall, Philadelphia.

Romeyn Berry, chairman of the athletic committee of the I. C. A. A. A. A., said: "The floor the athletes competed on at Madison Square Garden last year was rotten and dangerous. We do not want any of our boys injured and we will not take the chance of them going through a rotten board and breaking their legs.

"We have selected Madison Square Garden for the next meet with the proviso that the owners of the building provide a floor that will be safe to run and jump on. If we don't get such a floor we will seek another place."

Some of the members of the committee are considering Convention Hall, Philadelphia, but local college enthusiasts want the meet kept here. They point out that the Twenty-second Regiment Armory, where the indoor national championships will be held, is a suitable place for an intercollegiate meet.

'Gunner' Held to Draw by Cowler

New York, Sept. 27.—"Gunboat" Smith and Tom Cowler, the English heavyweight, battled ten rounds to a draw at the Broadway Sporting Club. Tom was there with plenty of cleverness, while the "Gunner" was filled up with the rough stuff. In the early part Thomas ducked in and out, tapping the "Gunner" in the latter rounds the "Gunner" slammed Tom hard, thus making everything even.

There were several occasions when the "Gunner" could have been disqualified for getting over-anxious. In the second period he butted Tom over the right eye. Tom was in a prison setting the rest of the evening.

Again in the fourth, after being ordered to break, the "Gunner" plastered Thomas with a scorching right swing.

The "Gunner" evened matters by apologizing after being warned and shaking Tom's mitt. Smith weighed 174½ pounds and Cowler 206½.

Dolly Dixon First at Rockville

Rockville, Ct., Sept. 27.—Two $500 stakes were raced away at the Fair grounds. The 2:19 trot saw Dolly Dixon in front after a five-heat contest. Peter Pan annexed the first two heats in fast miles, but tired in the following heats. The Boston-owned trotter, Alice Alfredi, was unsteady throughout and finished outside of the money.

The 2:15 pacing was reeled off by Dusky Dan in straight heats. Jack Kingsley secured second money with the chestnut gelding, Minnesua Boy.

Woodcliffe King, Colonel Forest and Princess Wilkes, with half a dozen others, compete in the 2:12 pace, the feature of today's card.

"Eddie" Mack Attacked at Arena Bouts

By RINGSIDE.

Eddie Mack, the well known Boston sporting man, who was shot in the groin at Braves Field in June, was attacked from the rear by Beno Breen, another member of Greater Boston's sporting gentry, while watching last night's fistic offering from a ringside seat at the Boston Arena; struck several hard blows on the mouth and felled to the ground.

Cooler heads quickly stepped between Mack and Breen. As Breen withdrew, leaving the building at once, it was reported, Mack was induced to remain in his chair. Mack was caught completely unawares and unhurt save for a slight abrasion under his lip.

But for this little incident, which was over almost as soon as it started, and a result of Mack-Murray and Dan Lane, two of the officials of the Armory A. A. hurrying to the scene and pacifying Mack, who could not for the life of him figure, he said why Breen should attack him in the manner he did, there was no added excitement to the weekly boxing bill.

O'LEARY JUST DOES WIN.

Johnny O'Leary of Seattle, Wash., and Vic Moran of New Orleans, lightweights of considerable renown, put up anything but a brisk battle in the windup number. Moffitt Ehlberry, who officiated as referee, proclaimed O'Leary the winner, giving the Far Westerner the better of a very close call.

The fans expected a hurrah number, but one failed to materialize. O'Leary was making his first start since annihilated by Johnny Dundee, the noted New York Scotch-Wop.

"Darby" Kelly's charge failed to put up anything like the rushing, crushing battle he exhibited when in with Ever Hammer and Dundee in his two other Boston starts. He didn't display much pace, failed to box as well as usual, and, if he owns anything that resembles a punch he left it on West Eighth street, Buffalo, where he and Kelly are in business.

Moran was right with O'Leary most of the way. Yet, there might have been a shade in O'Leary's favor, but it was a right one at best. The bout summed up, was of the species nine referees out of ten would have called a draw.

CLOSE AT THE FINISH.

Still, O'Leary did have a slim shade on Moran, and, with Ehlberry getting away from his usual draw calls, really picked the right boy, though the decision he awarded the Seattle Flash was probably one of the luckiest that battler ever received.

Moran went into the ring uncertain as to how his hands were going to hold out. Both mitts have been causing him much or less trouble of late months and became badly puffed up as a result of his work in training quarters.

Same as always, Vic fought an apparent indifferent battle. For all that, he boxed practically as dexterously as O'Leary, though lacking the sting on the force he displayed most nights that's not saying much; aimed over an occasional stiff punch; made his opponent miss a flock of smashes and right at the final gong got home a stiff left that staggered O'Leary.

This was really the stiffest wallop of the night. It came when the fight had but five seconds to go, so, of course, ran for the Pan Sweeney. At times, but only at times, did O'Leary and Moran work fast enough to please the fans. On the whole, their bout proved a big disappointment.

FLYNN HAS HIS SAY.

According to Leo P. Flynn, Pete Hartley's manager, the New Haven boy's match with Billy Meade was made at catchweights. Hence, Lee cannot for the life of him see why Hartley should have been asked to weigh in and what difference it made to the McCarthy crowd what his battler weighed.

It was announced that Meyers weighed 125 pounds. Hartley seemed the heavier boy of the two, but it is Flynn's claim that there was not over six pounds difference. If that much. He that as it may, Hartley loomed up as all of five pounds heavier than Meyers.

The squatty kid put up his usual rushing battle and did his accustomed. But he met a vastly improved Hartley last night to the Hartley he went against a fortnight ago, and all he got was the stone-cold boxon, which in ringdom world isn't much.

For all that, Hartley wasn't mussed up much and no matter the decision Larry Cheney awarded him.

There was considerable action in the two six-rounders. Johnny Morris of Montreal started by stopping Joe Clamp of the North End in four rounds. Next, Nels Segal of Revere was trans. Phil Rogers of New Bedford. "Flash" was dropped a couple of times in the last stanza.

Brickley Weeds Out B. C. Squad

Coach Brickley of the Boston College squad has made known the names of the men who will represent the varsity and second teams this Fall.

While there will doubtless be more shifting in the personnel of the first eleven before Brickley is through his work, the present division gives a fairly accurate line on how the Maroon and Gold will finally stack up.

The "elusive" Tansey made his first appearance on Alumni Field. Tansey is the All Intercholastic star from Commerce and has been the subject of a lot of rumors at Boston College the past several weeks.

Another newcomer who is going through workouts under Trainer Bob Fowler is Joe Hunt, a fast player from Boston College High's team of last Fall. Besides his prowess as a football star Hunt holds high honors as an oarsman. The lineup of the first team follows:

Trowbridge, l.e.; Tierny, l.t.; Jack Sullivan, l.g.; Foye, c.; Collins, r.g.; Bulger Lowe, r.t.; Cotter, r.e.; Regan, q.b.; Fitzpatrick, l.h.b.; McKenna and Looney, r.h.b.; Fitzgerald, f.b.

On the second team are: Kiray, l.e.; O'Brien, l.t.; Dulles, l.g.; Fagan, Tim Murry, Brawley, c.; Hunt, r.g.; Mahoney, r.t.; Vaughn, r.e.; Vance, q.b.; Dee, Adels Horigan, Carr and Austin in the backfield.

Other men representing teams are: Sinclair, Hunt, McKenzie, O'Brien, Murry, Bowling, Grabosky, Hurley, Daly, Bull, O'Connor, Ryder, Sargent, Tobin and Campbell.

PENN STATE LOSES ITS CRACK CENTRE

State College, Pa., Sept. 27.—Painter, centre on last year's Penn State eleven, has fallen under the faculty ban. His case has been under advisement for a fortnight, and it was hoped it might be adjusted. Early season indications point to a repetition of last year's record, when the Blue and White went through its schedule of nine games without a minute of time taken out because of injuries to its players.

GOWAN QUIT WAR TO PLAY WITH TIGER ELEVEN

Lake Minnewaska, N. Y., Sept. 27.—Gowan and McLean, two line men of varsity experience, came up the mountain to the Tigers' lair and were out in togs.

Gowan came to Minnewaska from France, where he has been dodging bullets at the front and incidentally driving a Red Cross ambulance. He claims that the war game is far more exciting than football.

Gowan is a centre candidate and will probably alternate at the pivot position with Gennert this Fall. McLean played at tackle last Fall and was given a warm hand by the coaches, who are troubled with the scarcity of experienced tackles.

SCRUBS SET BACK ARMY.

West Point, Sept. 27.—Although the varsity scored twice in its scrimmage with the scrubs, the drill was not entirely satisfactory to the coaches The men fumbled frequently, some of the air-line plays were poorly executed and Captain Graves, the line coach, found plenty to criticise in the slow work of the forwards. The scrub linemen broke up the varsity plays before they were really started.

JACOBS HERO OF COMBAT

Needham High won from Newton High on Claflin Field, Newtonville, 7-0. Jacobs, Needham's halfback, ran fifty-five yards for a touchdown and also kicked the goal.

FORDHAM LANDS KICKER.

New York, Sept. 27. — The Fordham varsity eleven cut loose and in a lively thirty-minute scrimmage scored three times against the scrubs. The touchdowns were the first scores of the season.

The kicking situation, which has been the chief concern of the coaches, cleared considerably yesterday when Dempsey, Georgetown's star kicker and a backfield regular last season, reported for practice. Dempsey will enter Fordham Law School.

HARVARD PERSONALS

FRED MITCHELL, boss of the Braves when Boss Stallings is not about, is to close up his coaching accounts at Harvard this week. "Mitch" will have charge of Fall practice.

HULL, a varsity guard, has quit the squad to try for a place as shot-putter on the track team.

JOHNNY MAGEE was indirectly considered as field event coach at Harvard. However, he has a contract with Bowdoin until June. Leadbetter, the weight-thrower, and Savage, one of the best hurdlers in college athletics, are Magee products.

CHARLEY HEFFENGER, one of Coach Hardib's best cross-country prospects, is still at the border.

Ralph Exley, the Exeter guard, and Lancaster, halfback and former Middlesex school captain, are two who have reported for Coach Rollins' freshman eleven.

TWO TUFTS MEN ARE HURT IN SCRIMMAGE

Halfback Mitchell and Guard Morrison of the Tufts varsity were injured in the day's scrimmage. Mitchell had a tooth driven through his upper lip, which required several stitches, and he pluckily remained on the field. Morrison hurt his leg, as well as having the middle finger on his right hand slightly fractured.

The first two eleven were put through stiff signal practice in the secret session. Jeffery ran the team during a greater part of the afternoon and looms up as a fitting successor to "Bill" Parks. Wallace Olson, '17, a former Bowdoin player, reported for the first time.

THREE EVENTS ON MEDFORD PROGRAM

Today's harness horse program at Combination Park, Medford, consists of the 2:19 trot, 2:17 pace and free-for-all. The three events are well filled. Evan Williams (Fleming) won the 2:16 trot, the feature of yesterday's card, taking the last three heats after losing the first to Carnathan (Fox).

Childs (Fox) annexed the 2:22 trot, while McCulley (Gilbons) took the 2:21 pace.

"BEATRICE FAIRFAX"

Novelized From the Great Film Play
By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

By Beatrice Fairfax.

AFTER I had given Madeline Grey my promise that her letters to a long dead lover should not appear in The Vampire I sat a moment in thought—fairly overwhelmed by the magnitude of the seemingly simple task I had undertaken. I had forgotten all about my luncheon engagement with one J. Barton, and when the maid ushered him in I fairly gasped with relief.

If there was a way out Jimmy would help us find it. After I had introduced him to his hostess I gave her some idea of my faith in him by saying: "If only you will let me tell Mr. Barton your story, I'm sure he will help me find a way to help you."

Mrs. Grey hesitated for a moment. But where is the woman who can resist Jimmy's grin, Jimmy's honest eyes and the look of dependableness which lurks just back of the youthful impishness which is part of Jimmy's expression—and stock in trade?

So we told Jimmy the story—and, as some newspapermen say, "He fairly ate it up."

Jimmy Joins the Chase

"Do you know, Mrs. Grey, you are a good Samaritan—nothing less. I've been pining to try conclusions with The Vampire gentleman for some time past, but I hadn't a logical excuse for wasting my time on him.

"Now that you have put it into the day's work I am justified in carrying out the desire of my young heart, Miss Beatrice Fairfax, you are cordially disinvited to help me eat up six dollars and thirty cents. I go to board the lion in his den—"The Vampire" in the lair.

And Jimmy and I departed, leaving Madeline Grey so reassured, so calmly trusting that when our task looked most hopeless I sacrificed a personal principle of right rather than her faith in the helpers on whom she had called in her hour of need.

We decided to go our several ways to work after a quick lunch of crackers and milk which did not seriously deplete Jimmy's riches. I invited the youth to report progress over a dinner table, with Granny at the head of the festal board and Granny's excellent ideas of a dinner upon it.

I knew this story would particularly enlist the sympathies of the dear old lady whose interest in my "lovelorn" is as deep as mine, with all the wisdom of her rich and generous seventy years of splendid living to give her viewpoint sanity and insight.

Jimmy always insists on two big cups of Granny's coffee—no "foolish little demi-tasse of that ambrosial brew" will suffice, he says. And as he began the first, Mr. Barton related the story of his experience with Simeon Gold.

The Vampire Offices

"Mrs. Fairfax, if ever you behold the mahogany and green plush and plate glass effects which house The Vampire, you'll decide that the rest of New York's publishers ought to consult an interior decorator! Gold has everything material to make you loath the lack of spirit and ethics and decency which marks his dirty sheet about twice as much as you would have to hate it if he got it out in a grimy loft downtown on Grand street. I tell you, all that mahogany and plush is stifling.

"And Gold is as rich and oily and unctuous as his office itself. He is a gentleman of forty-five. Say! His scarf was a more expressive purple than any little Jimmy ever dared to wear—and everywhere he could have a dab of purple to match, he it cuff links or silken socks, Simeon was there with the beautiful hue.

"He was so well groomed, I hated to muss him up by shaking hands—but I did, and I gave him a cigar, too. Oh, yes, I did everything to make Simeon think well of little Jimmy.

"Mrs. Fairfax, I don't think I ever worked so hard to try to make a hit with Beatrice!"

Then the irrepressible J. B. sat back to observe what effect his calling her Beatrice would have on Miss Fairfax. It had none, for I was very much more interested in his encounter with Simeon Gold than in an attempt to counter his boyish impudence on my own score.

"Mr. Barton, Mrs. Fairfax and her granddaughter beg of you to report your interview," said I.

Jimmy Interviews Gold

"Well, I began it gayly enough. I sailed right in, but the trouble is, my sailing didn't get me anywhere. I began thus: 'Gold, my paper wants to know how you run yours without getting killed.'

"Mr. Gold smiled back amiably. He explained to me that he is precious careful to avoid libel suits. He has little scouts all over the country, anf if what they report isn't based on incontrovertible evidence, it is printed in such a way that nobody can take offence at it without laying himself open to the retort courteous.

"You see, they either mention no names or they come across with absolute documents in evidence, and first you get a chance to buy silence on your own behalf before the public gets a chance to buy information in the sheets of The Vampire.

"Oh, Gold knows how to run his shady little business—and besides, he keeps a heavy revolver in a drawer conveniently located in regard to the reaching distance of his right hand.

"Little Jimmy played he was afraid of the big gun, and Gold thought him such a cute little boy and so easily impressed by the giant of journalism that he wasn't afraid to entertain him by another little glimpse into his clever management of men and things.

"Said he to me: 'Oh, I'm with-in the law every time, boy. And I have my gun to back up the law with a little force. And if the other fellow gets ugly he can only muss me up. He can't get any of my important papers, for I keep all my most precious documents safe at home in a carefully thought-out hiding place in my own bedroom. So do you see how anybody can hope to beat my game?'

"I told him I didn't see—and I took my departure. Might I have three cups of that coffee tonight, Mrs. Fairfax?"

"Jimmy Barton—is that all? Do you mean to say you never opened your mouth about Madeline Grey?" I cried, accusingly.

Jimmy looked wise aware of the fact that Jimmy and Granny were smiling at me with the amusement older folks show at a child's impatience. Jimmy had a plan. And Granny had at least an inkling of what that plan was!

Jimmy's Plan

"All right; I can see that you might deliberately omit all mention of Madeline Grey. But I can't see why. This may be a very wonderful campaign, but I'd love to know what your point of attack is."

"Miss Beatrice—I hate to tell you. It is the only way, but it won't appeal to you. I think I can trust your grandmother to recognize that when you are dealing with a rattlesnake you don't warn him that you have a nice forked stick with which you are going to pin down his head so he can't hurt you. But I'm afraid you'll think my methods—questionable. Still I think I figured out the only way."

Then Jimmy told us his plan. It was the only way. I could see that even while Granny and Jimmy feared that I would argue against it. I didn't like it. I don't like it yet. It reflected no credit on us, and of course, it had to be done by us as private individuals, not as representative of the Journal. A paper which stands for law and order and the best in journalism cannot be dragged by loyal representatives into a situation where they find themselves distinctly outside the law.

For Jimmy's plan was a bold counter stroke with which to meet the evil ingenuity of Simeon Gold. It was the only feasible plan—but it lay outside of law and order and ethics. It was a desperate chance. If we won we saved Madeline Grey. If we lost we lost more than I'd like to contemplate, and we came into the power of a man who would not hesitate to break us.

We must venture into the toils of Simeon Gold, and none of the power of the press which had been our shield and buckler in other ventures could save us if we failed.

"But we won't fail," Jimmy declared.

That remained to be seen!

A Girl and a Man

Agnes on Returning Home Finds Her Aunt in a Faint.

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER XXXV.

Copyright, 1916, Star Company

The heat was still intense, when, at 6 o'clock, Agnes Morley climbed the stairs to her home.

The sun hung low in the West like a ball of fire, shining redly through the mist that had lain like a pall over the city all day. There was no relief in sight, the evening papers said.

Looking back over the past day, Agnes felt as if she could not have endured it had it not been for the pleasant hour of rest and refreshment that she had had with Mr. Bainbridge that noon. She wondered whether she would tell her aunt of it—then decided not to do so. Aunt Lucy might not understand. She had some old-fashioned notions about what girls in offices should and should not do.

As Agnes opened the front door with her latch-key, the stillness of the little flat struck her as unusual. "Auntie!" she called.

But there was no reply. There was nobody in the living-room, and as Agnes went into the sleeping bedroom, she found that this, too, was empty.

"Auntie!" she called again, hurrying down the narrow hall to the kitchen.

Here, she uttered an exclamation of horror. For, lying full-length on the floor, was Miss Morley. For an instant the awful idea seized the girl that the elderly woman was dead. Then, as she ran forward, she saw that her aunt had fainted.

Cold water dashed in her face made Miss Lucy open her eyes and struggle to a sitting posture.

"I'm all right!" she hastened to assure her niece, whose pale face attested to her fright. "Don't worry, dear. It is nothing."

MISS LUCY IS STRICKEN

"But it is something," Agnes contradicted. "Please don't move yet. Wait, and I will bring you a pillow to put under your head."

But when she returned with a pillow, Miss Lucy was standing up, holding fast to a chair and swaying weakly.

"I tell you it is nothing, nothing," she repeated.

"Come with me and lie down," Agnes ordered, putting her arm about the slight creature and leading her into her bedroom.

When she had undressed Miss Lucy, and made her get into bed, she slipped away long enough to run upstairs to the apartment of a neighbor, who had a telephone. Here she called up Miss Lucy's physician and asked him to come at once. Returning to her aunt's room she tried to speak naturally.

"The heat was too much for you, perhaps," she ventured. "What were you doing when you fainted?"

"I was hesitating to get dinner, but I couldn't go on with it. I am sorry, dearie. But you must not worry. These attacks don't mean anything."

"These attacks!" Agnes exclaimed. "Have you had one before today?"

Miss Lucy looked embarrassed as she appreciated that she had made an admission she had not intended to make.

"—I—mean," she began, but Agnes checked her.

"Tell me the truth," she said sternly. "Have you fainted before?"

"Well, just a little, once in a while," Miss Lucy acknowledged.

"Auntie, you are keeping something from me," Agnes insisted, sitting down by the invalid and taking her hand. "Have you fainted like this before?"

"Well, not just exactly as I did just now," Miss Lucy strove to be truthful, yet to avoid alarming the girl. "Several times I have come to myself and found that I had just sort of sunk down somewhere and forgotten things for a minute, but I always came around of myself. I would today, too, I guess, if you had not happened in when you did."

"Don't worry, dear. It is nothing."

When Dr. Martin arrived, Miss Lucy protested feebly at Agnes' extravagance in sending for him. But she promised to obey his orders and lie still until tomorrow morning.

TROUBLE WITH HER HEART

"The trouble is with her heart," Dr. Martin told Agnes bluntly, when she followed him into the hall. "She has had heart trouble for years, but it is getting worse. She ought not to be left alone. Not that she needs expert care—for there is no cure for the trouble—but she ought to have someone at hand in case she has a faint turn. You're in business now, aren't you?"

"Yes," Agnes said. "Should I stay at home?"

"Lord, no! Who'd make the money if you didn't make it?" was the gruff rejoinder. "If you stopped work, that would trouble Miss Morley to death. She has more peace of mind now than she's had in many a long day. No, whatever comes, you stick to your J b, for her sake even more than your own! Isn't there some young person who can come here for each day while you're away?"

After a moments cogitation Agnes remembered the daughter of the woman who did the laundry work for her aunt and herself.

"Yes," she said, "I know a young girl that finished grammar school this year, and who wants to go into service next Winter. Just now she's doing nothing. She will probably charge less than an older person would."

That evening, after asking the neighbor from upstairs to sit for an hour with Miss Morley, Agnes walked over to her laundress' home and engaged the services of Jennie O'Neil for each working day for the rest of the Summer, beginning with the following morning.

"And now," the weary girl mused when, having seen her aunt settled comfortably for the night, she lay down herself, "as the doctor said, whatever comes I have got to keep my job—for auntie's sake even more than my own!"

A Brother Worth Having

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

There is nothing more splendid than a real friendship between brother and sister. It seems to me very tragic that such friendships are rare. A little understanding, a little toleration, a little respect for each other's viewpoint and personality would probably make a real friendship between brother and sister a foregone conclusion.

No brother can prove his real interest in his sister by taking a suspicious attitude toward every friend she has or by refusing to let her share the pleasures which he generally approves of for other girls or by selfishly neglecting her.

And no sister can cement happy relationships between her brother and herself by nagging at him for everything he does and by making demands of all sorts on him and by prying into his affairs.

The way to possess a brother worth having is to be a sister worth having—and of course the converse of the proposition is equally true.

There are a few little things and some large ones in which brothers and sisters ought to defer to each other. Here is just an outline suggestion of them. Work them up and apply them to your own individual cases and see what harmony in your family they produce.

Brothers, attention. Don't issue orders to your sister. If you see her going about with boys and girls of whom you suspect evil, make sure you are right and then persuade her that you love her too much to permit her to be criticised because of her companions.

Don't try to take all her fun away from her by cutting her off from the only people she knows, but exert yourself to substitute other friends. Be grateful for any little favors she does you and don't ever demand as your right the sewing on of buttons or the mending of socks.

Be thoughtful, considerate, generous; bring some of the courtesy you show your sweetheart into your treatment of your sister. Make a friend and confidante of her. Show a little respect for her and a little belief in the fact that she has brains and judgment and a logical mind to which you can appeal—even if "she is a woman."

Now, girls, here's your little sermonette. Study your brother's tastes and whims and try to please him with little bits of attention such as a woman has it in her power to offer a man. When he introduces you to his friends, try to make a good impression; remember, he has a certain pride in his girls's family.

Accept advice with the feeling and attitude that brother probably knows whereof he speaks and means it for your own good when he offers suggestions. His worldly wisdom will save you from mistakes that might be fatal to your happiness. His natural chivalry will protect you in many difficult situations.

The point is that brothers and sisters ought to be chums—pals—the best of friends. I suggest that they try it.

Are You a Dangerous Girl?

Here are six of them; perhaps you will discover your prototype among them. Some of the possibilities suggested by the popular song—in next Sunday's Boston AMERICAN.

Wives I Might Have Been

As the Wife of a Great Catch Who Had Domineering Ways

By JANE McLEAN

Concerning the matter I am about to relate, I must confess that I was the only one to blame. If a girl flirts a little bit with a man, and lets herself like him a little bit, and it turns out that he is only flirting, why it serves her right if he suspects that she is serious.

There are ever so many ways of showing a man that you are crazy about him. One very obvious way is accepting his invitations almost as quickly as he gives them, like a hungry fish waiting for a fat worm to fall into its mouth. I have learned these ways and means since then, but I really did like him.

It all happened while I was visiting one Summer. He was tall and a little older than the others. He had a reputation of being a little bit wicked, and that nothing definite was known about him, and he had more money than anyone else in the place. Besides, he was the oldest and most aristocratic family there, and he was considered a great catch.

I was the new girl in town, with a whole trunk full of fascinating clothes and ways that were a little different I suppose. At any rate, he began to pay me surprising attention. He didn't go at it gradually, but just took me by storm, showing up in his car and making it evident that he admired me. I am sure that if I had played my cards right I might have married him. As things turned out I am glad that I had such a poor hand to play, for his domineering ways would have been the end of me.

I used to drive me mad to hear the different opinions about him right after he began to take me around.

Bess Olds used to say proudly, "He never paid any attention to girls till Anne came up."

And then one of the others would say, "That's true enough, but she's welcome to him. He's the most domineering man I ever saw, and the way he criticizes a girl-he takes out is awful."

"What do you think, Annie," Bess would say, turning to me.

"Oh, I don't know," I would respond carelessly, as though men meant nothing to me. And then in a burst of confidence I would relent and admit that I thought he was a wonder. That was where I made a mistake. I can see that now.

Fred used to say, shortly, "I like you because you're different," and I, like the little fool that I was, would do everything in my power to be still more different. Instead of course, I should have affected a great indifference, and then he wouldn't have had an idea how to take me.

That affair seems to have happened years ago, now that I look back at it. This Summer I went on to stay a week-end with Bess Olds, and Fred brought his wife to an affair Bess gave for me. Fred's wife was quite a stunning looking girl, too, and I felt just a little twinge of envy when I saw them together. Of course, I have a record for breaking hearts now, and I could afford to be generous, although I was awfully indifferent when Fred came up and spoke to me. I heard him say to his wife, so that everyone could hear:

"What on earth made you put that dress on for? It's the worst loking thing you ever wore.'

These fascinating, domineering ways that some men have before marriage often become tyrannical. I had a perfectly fine time visiting Bess, but oh, how glad I am that I did not marry Fred.

A Poser

A bishop addressed a large assembly of Sunday-school children, and wound up by asking, in a very paternal way, "And now, is there any little boy, or any little girl, who would like to ask me a question?"

A thin, shrill voice at the back of the room called out, "Please, sir, why did the angels walk up and down Jacob's ladder when they had wings?"

"Oh, ah, yes—I see," said the bishop. "And now, is there any little girl who would like to answer this question?"

Don't wait for time to heal your skin—

"Oh It will get well anyhow!" you say? Perhaps it will, and perhaps it won't. Maybe it will get worse instead. And think of the discomfort and embarrassment it causes you even now.

NEW RECORDS IN NEW YORK MARKET

New high record prices were made on the New York exchange today by Reading at 115¼ and American Beet Sugar at 99. Prices were generally higher at noon, and trading continued on an enormous scale, transactions in the first hour alone aggregating 312,000 shares.

Interest centred in the movement of the railroad stocks. Besides Reading's advance of two points, a feature was the strength of Union Pacific and Chesapeake & Ohio, the former lifting 1⅞ to 125⅝ and the latter ⅝ to 68½, the highest prices for both in two years. Canadian Pacific, Norfolk & Western and New York Central also made big gains.

Steel and copper stocks, while not so active as in preceding days, showed strength in spots. United States Steel had a point gain near the start, and at noon showed a gain of ⅝. Crucible Steel was strong, advancing 1⅝ to 93⅝.

At noon General Motors showed the biggest gain, up 12⅝ points, while Texas Company had the biggest loss, off 7. Another strong stock was General Electric, up 8½ points. Other gains were Studebaker 2, Atlantic Gulf 2⅝, Marine preferred 1⅝ and New York Air Brake 1¼.

The Boston market was strong, with coppers in big demand. Isle Royale at 37¾ reached its highest price since 1912. Tamarack advanced 1⅝ and Atlantic Gulf 2¼. St. Mary's, Mohawk, Osceola and Superior showed gains of a point each at noon.

BABETTE TRICKED AND FOUGHT LUPO

Babette was a flirt; yet like all her sex, she was loyal to those she loved!

Lupo, on the other hand, was loyal only to duty. But he had an eye for feminine beauty just the same.

How Babette first tricked Lupo, then fought him—but listen. This is Babette:

"She sunk her mighty jaws deep down toward Lupo's vertebra . . . Her teeth sank into the back of his neck, gouts of blood from the first wound shooting into her eyes and blinding her . . .

Lupo, you understand, was a police dog; Babette of the same breed but without his police training. How these two remoulded the destinies of their human associates is told in John A. Moroso's peculiarly delightful style in "Babette," the leading short story in the AMERICAN Sunday Monthly Magazine — which is given free with next Sunday's AMERICAN.

And that is only one feature. For example: William J. Burns is perhaps the greatest American detective. From his ripe store of experiences he draws now and then one peculiarly dramatic, and with the assistance of George Jean Nathan, drafts it into story form.

Such is the story of "The Left-Handed Letter," which appears in the Sunday AMERICAN.

And of course, the most amazing thing about the magazine, in view of its high standing, is that it is GIVEN AWAY, absolutely free, with Sunday's Boston AMERICAN.

sia, headache, sleeplessness, sluggish mind, nervousness, sore feet, night sweats, etc., Plant Juice, the new herbal stomach bracer, acts like a miracle, purifies the blood, washes out the poisonous matter, and corrects diseased conditions of the stomach, liver and kidneys.

Daily local people are testifying in no uncertain terms as to benefits received from Plant Juice after years of long standing. Recently Mrs. Rose Caraway, who lives at 9 Cross Elm Street, Charlestown, a well-known lady of this city, having suffered from dyspepsia the past fifty years, said:

"For ten years I have suffered with indigestion and dyspepsia. I could not eat any solid food at all as it would ferment in my stomach and cause gas to form there. I had a bad taste in my mouth. My liver was affected, which made me very dizzy at times I thought I would fall over. I had headaches, could not sleep at night and felt weak all the time. I had noises in my ears and shooting pains all through my body which caused me constant agony; was always constipated and could not get any medicine to relieve me, until I started to take Plant Juice. I can say certainly wonderful in my case, as I felt relieved from the first dose it was and the ringing noises which I had in my ears entirely disappeared. I can eat anything and digest it, I sleep well, am not constipated, and can truthfully say that Plant Juice has entirely cured me. I certainly feel that Plant Juice a public statement and am glad to make it."

A Benefit of the War---Beards Off

Copyright, 1916, by the Star Company.

THE war has taught at least one of the fighting nations—France—that hair on the face of man is foolish.

Throughout the French army the order has gone, "Shave your face clean." And many a sad-eyed French woman will wonder what has happened to her dear "mari" when the hero comes home without the black whiskers or the beautiful little pointed moustache.

This shaving of the beards—let us hope it will spread from France to other nations—is an excellent thing, and the war is to be thanked for it.

The Frenchmen living in the horrible trenches, in filth that could not be overcome, soon realized that it was foolish to carry around on their faces a warm fuzzy nest in which microbes might breed. (American doctors who wear beards please note and try to make up your minds to sacrifice the germ carriers that you wear on YOUR faces. Please believe that the day has gone by where a full set of whiskers makes the doctor look wise and high priced in the eyes even of the ignorant.)

A beard on the human face, highly appreciated by its owner, and much admired by foolish females, is a trait of ancient animal life and brutality.

In the old days a man wanted to look as frightful as he could, and a big, bushy beard helped him to look frightful.

The male lion had his mane, and in that there was some common sense, for it made it difficult for the other lion to bite his neck and get at the jugular vein.

There was common sense also in the big beard on the face and neck of our savage ancestors. For when primitive men fought, they had long canine teeth like wolves, and they bit each other's faces and throats, and the whiskers probably protected them.

But the value of whiskers as a protection against teeth and a protection against the cold has gone by.

And today the beard of man is simply a monstrosity that holds the dirt, makes it difficult for the prosperous, and almost impossible for the poor, to get their faces really clean.

The beard is a nest for disease-breeding germs of all kinds. The doctor with whiskers who puts his ear on the chest of a child—that, for all we know, may have scarlet fever—and then goes on to some other child and puts the same ear and the same set of whiskers on that other child's chest is committing a criminal act, and we propose to say so quite often.

Of two doctors equally intelligent, take the one that has the intelligence to shave his face.

The only real excuse for whiskers and moustache is the excuse of the man with a weak chin or a bad, vicious, sensual, weak or ugly mouth.

If you frankly admit that you wear hair on your face to hide the face, then art has nothing more to say. By all means, hide it, if it needs hiding.

But the weak chin gets stronger when the whiskers are shaved off. And the weak mouth gradually gets stronger when the hair is cut off. The change may not come in one generation, but it comes in several.

One word to women: Please stop praising and encouraging beards and moustaches. If you want to be responsible for the foolish little moustaches that the college boys grow, and for the silly bushy whiskers that your husbands think represent "masculine strength," we tell you now that the French Government, instructed by its medical scientists, officially indorses the statement that whiskers are harmful, filthy, breeders of disease. Please stop admiring them and persuading men to "raise" them.

The great thing in a human face is expression. And there is no expression in whiskers, no matter how you trim them, or dye them, or split them, or comb, or curl them.

Our sympathy is with the French barbers, who have spent a lifetime conquering the art of trimming whiskers to just the right point. Otherwise we rejoice without qualification in this result of the war—whiskers off.

Preserve the Mann Law; Convict Blackmailers

WE trust that the Department of Justice will vigorously and unrelentingly pursue the blackmailing gang which has robbed so many victims under cover of the Mann law.

To be candid, we have no particular sympathy with the victims.

They were made victims simply because they lacked both morals and courage. If they had behaved themselves properly they could not have been threatened; and if they had had the courage of a mouse they would have called a policeman when the blackmailers began to talk of payments.

The thing we are interested in is the permanence of the Mann law. It is a good law and a law that protects thousands of girls from white slavery in its vilest form.

If it is permitted to become an instrument of blackmail, the Mann law will fall into disrepute and there may be a successful effort to repeal it.

The way to prevent this is to punish severely the blackmailers who misuse the law for felonious ends.

As we say, we hope the prosecution will be relentless and the sentences imposed on these villains the severest that lie in the power of the judges to inflict.

More Truth Than Poetry

The Age of Red Blood

In Chicago they are serving tea to the lady patrons of the prize ring.

MY lady toys with cakes and tea while Mike the Mugg and Red McGee
Side-step and swing around the ring,
And maul each other's lunches;
And as the cheering brew she sips, a happy smile is on her lips,
And glad surprise lights up her eyes,
To see the blows and punches.

SOMETIMES she'll pause with bated breath when Red looks beaten half to death,
But when once more Mike hits the floor,
And, filled with fresh endeavor,
Red lands a wallop to the nose and forth the ruddy claret flows,
She cries, "Dear me! It's hard to see
How Red can be so clever!"

BRIGHT-EYED and fascination-bound she sips her tea round after round,
Till Michael lies with half-closed eyes,
His thirst for battle ended;
And then she rises to depart, her hand upon her throbbing heart,
And with a sigh she says, "Oh! My!
That bout was simply splendid!"

The Death Rate in This War

By Woods Hutchinson, M. D.

The World's Best Known Writer on Medical Subjects

PART TWO

WHEN we had got our mathematical breath back after the first shock of dismay and began to consider the casualty lists in proportion to the enormous numbers engaged and the thousand-mile lengths of battle line, we gained a little relief. While the deaths and maimings were still pitiable and heart-rending enough in the mass, their relations to the numbers engaged and to the risk run by each individual soldier and to the ultimate effect upon the nations at war, in respect to decimation or depopulation, were found to be much less serious than we had at first supposed.

It is, of course, impossible yet to speak with positiveness about the deadliness or even the bloodiness of this war, for the obvious reason that the returns are not yet all in. Moreover, such returns as have been published are incomplete, both in range and in form, for of the three grim headings—Killed, Wounded and Missing—it is impossible to say how many of the last will ultimately go to swell the first and how many be found to be in prison camps and what further per cent. of the wounded will die.

However, we now know that the percentage of wounded, who have survived to be officially reported as such, which will ultimately die, is exceedingly small, not more than 2 per cent. at the outside, and also from the experience of former wars that not more than a fifth of the missing will ultimately turn out to be dead, so that by adding a fifth of the missing and a thirty-fifth of the wounded to the number of known killed we can get a pretty fair approximation to the probable total fatalities.

Another discount which, of course, has to be made, is that the lists of casualties reported by each army headquarters may be safely regarded as severely censored and shrunk to the lowest possible minimum which would be thought credible, or which the national spirit could bear at the time. But, fortunately, most of the war offices have been obliging enough, not merely to report their own casualties, but also those of the enemy, and by adding together the numbers of losses admitted by its opponents and dividing the result by two we shall probably come not very wide of the mark. And by this method, which, of course, is only an estimate, but fairly dependable, we can already draw the unexpected but somewhat consoling conclusion that the actual loss in percentages of numbers engaged, though slightly above that of our own Civil War, is well below the death rate of either the Napoleonic or Revolutionary Wars.

Astrology Is Superstition, But It Has Changed History of World

Garrett P. Serviss Tells Why the Ancients Came to Regard the Planets as Celestial Spirits Controlling the Destinies of Nations and of Men

By Garrett P. Serviss

"Will you please tell me if you think it is possible to read the future by the stars? I have had two life readings by two different astrologers and they both say practically the same thing, and some of the things have really happened to me. They also say I can make my life as I want it if I let myself be guided by what the stars say. I have had a lot of trouble in the past, but am doubtful about trusting men who live in another world. Please advise me. O. S.
"Amenia, N. Y."

I HAVE generally refrained from answering questions like the above, but this lady in Amenia somehow awakens one's sympathy and so I will tell her what I think.

No, in my opinion, it is not possible to read the future by the stars. Those mighty and distant suns were not created to watch over the insignificant destinies of infinitesimal man. But it is the planets, rather than the stars, that the astrologers imagine to have an influence over human affairs.

Of Course Planets Can Have No Effect on the Fates of Men on Earth

These planets are simply other worlds, which revolve, like the earth, around the sun. Some, like the moon and Mercury, appear to be barren balls of rock; others, like Jupiter and Saturn, are evidently globes composed mostly of clouds of gas and vapor; still others, like Venus and Mars, may possibly bear inhabitants on their surfaces as the earth does.

Why should any reasonable man or woman suppose that those far-off masses of common matter influence the character, the adventures, the achievements and the crimes of the little creatures that crawl upon this particular globe of ours? The assertion that they do so is a pure play of fancy. There is not the slightest scientific evidence to support it.

Historically, astrology is extremely interesting. It has played a great part in the development of human society. Kings, warriors, statesmen, and even astronomers in old times believed in it. Those were the days when real science had not been born, and when the ignorance of nature's simplest facts displayed by the most "learned" men exceeded the innocence of a child.

The Augurs Who Interpreted Omens Held the Fate of Rome's Armies

Astrology is a survival from the age when generals, sent out with armies to save their countries from invasion or destruction, wasted days and lost golden opportunities, while awaiting the reports of soothsayers upon the omens derived from the appearance of the entrails of animals slain before an altar or from the direction of the flight of crows.

It was one of astrology's sister "sciences" that kept the Spartans waiting at home for a change of the moon before marching to Marathon, where the fortunes of Greece and of all the Western World were to be decided, and which left all the glory of that day to be reaped by Athens and her little ally Platea.

It was a strange, dark world that astrology and its cognate superstitions reigned over. But there were enlightened minds even then which penetrated the mist. When you read Caesar's personal history of his great campaigns in Gaul, you hear nothing about soothsayers, or the entrails of victims, or the flight of cawing crows. You hear only of sudden and desperate battles, of rapid and unexpected marches, of victory upon victory, and not a moment lost in waiting for auspices. Caesar reformed the calendar, but he had no use for astrology.

The survival of astrology is due principally to the deep-seated love of mystery among mankind. The great agents with which it pretends to deal are located in the sky, which has always been regarded as the abode of gods and superior powers. In its earlier days astronomy possessed no facts about the stars and planets which militated against the astrological idea of their influences.

Before Science Was Born, Men Naturally Regarded Planets as Celestial Rulers

On the contrary, those wonderful lights in the sky, some of which were seen to move about with slow and majestic motions, now advancing, now retreating, now drawing close together and shining for a while side by side, as if in fateful consultation, or conspiration, and now glaring at one another from diametrically opposite quarters of the heavens, like spirits of celestial space watching and perhaps contending over the fates of the helpless beings on the earth beneath them; the menacing color of such a planet as Mars, always associated with blood and disaster; the golden glow of Jupiter, suggesting wealth and good fortune; the quick movements of Mercury, suddenly disappearing from the west only to reappear in the east, and seeming to dog the sun; the marvellous splendor to which Venus periodically attains, now in the evening and now in the morning sky; the "inconstant moon," continually changing her face like a mask, and sometimes eclipsed as by the shadow of a great hand, moving invisibly across the firmament—all these things, before they had been scientifically explained, lent themselves naturally to the notion that they were portents and powers appointed to sway and foretell the fates of men.

And this notion had nothing ridiculous about it in an age when the earth was thought to be the centre of the universe, and men were regarded as the constant playthings, pets or victims alternately, of a multitude of jealous, man-minded and woman-minded gods and goddesses.

You should no more believe what an astrologer tells you the stars say than you believe what Mother Goose tells you the fairies say, for a soothsaying star or planet is as much a product of the imagination as a fairy.
